2 States' Laws Barring Price Cuts Upheld In High Court

Good Will Is Property, Justices Rule on Ill., Calif. Statutes.

F. C. C. Phone Firm Regulations Valid

Court Decisions.

Outstanding court decisions yesterday included:

Wade H. Cooper lost suit for discharge of receivership of United States Savings Bank.

Federal District Court at Boston held social security act's unemployment insurance tax is valid excise levy.

"Fair trade" laws of California and Illinois, aimed against price cutting on standard brand goods, were upheld by the Supreme Court.

Public utility holding company suit over delaying numerous cases to await ruling in Electric Bond and Share action was remanded to District court here.

Communications Commission's accounting rules for telephone companies upheld by Supreme Court.

Court of Claims called "arbitrary" refusal of General Accounting Office "to follow the law" on claim of retired army major for travel allowance from fort to his home.

'Fair Trade' Laws Upheld.

By Robert C. Albright.

Slapping at price-cutting in standard brand products, the United States Supreme Court yesterday upheld validity of two State "fair trade" statutes, ruling trade-marked good will is "property in the very real sense."

Both Illinois and California laws which prohibit sale of standard products below prices fixed by the producer by contract, were sustained by the high court.

"There is a great body of fact and opinion tending to show that price cutting by retail dealers is not only injurious to the good will and business of the producer and distributor of identified goods, but injurious to the general public as well," Justice Sutherland said for the court.

Only 2 of the 15 decisions handed down by the justices touched New Deal laws, leaving undetermined five such cases now before the court.

Cummings' Plea Referred.

Efforts of Attorney General Cummings to stay the multitude of public utility holding company act litigation until the Electric Bond & Share Co. test of his own choosing is decided were referred back to the Federal District Court for the District of Columbia for redetermination.

Federal Communications Commission prescription of a uniform system of accounts for telephone companies, and establishment of a new method of determining telephone rates by requiring companies to record "original cost" of purchased properties, were upheld.

And a ruling on constitutionality of the commodity exchange act was denied by the court, which declined

3-Billion-Dollar Line 'Bought' for $274,682

George A. Ball, fruit jar manufacturer, who found he had bought control of the 286 corporations in the $3,000,000,000 Van Sweringen rail empire for only $274,682.

Fruit Jar Manufacturer Tells Senate Inquiry of Purchasing Control of Roads to Help Van Sweringens.

By Felix Bruner.

How a little, gray, 74-year-old fruit jar manufacturer from Muncie, Ind., obtained control of one of America's greatest railroad empires, with 23,000 miles of tracks, for $274,682 was unfolded yesterday before the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee.

The story, one of the most amazing in American business history, was revealed by George A. Ball, who has suddenly found himself, as a result of expenditure of a comparatively trivial sum of money, the controlling stockholder of the vast Van Sweringen interests.

Evidently somewhat bewildered, Ball sat at a witness table and explained that a little more than a year ago he bought control of the Alleghany Corporation, principal Van Sweringen holding company, from New York bankers at an auction sale.

The Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad.
The Pere Marquette Railroad.
The Nickel Plate Railroad.
The Erie Railroad.
The Chicago & Eastern Illinois Railroad.
The Wheeling & Lake Erie Railroad.
The Missouri Pacific Railroad.

In addition, the purchase gave him control of bus lines, street railway companies, grain elevators, coal companies, terminal and office buildings—and a peach orchard.

The Van Sweringen securities, which had been posted as collateral for a loan of $39,500,000, were put on the auction block on September 30, 1935, by a group of New York bankers headed by J. P. Morgan & Co. In the list were 2,064,492 shares of the Alleghany Corporation, holding company for all the Van Sweringen railroads and most of their other property. Also on sale were sundry other Van Sweringen securities.

Ball, with Guy A. Tomlinson, of Cleveland, formed the Mid-America Corporation and bought in the lot for $3,121,000. They paid $274,682 for the Alleghany stock and

U. S. Workers' Jury Service Is Ruled Valid

Appeal of Liquor Ring Blocked, Tea Shop Slayer Doomed.

The right of Government employes to serve on criminal juries in the District was upheld by the United States Supreme Court yesterday.

In a forceful opinion read by Chief Justice Hughes the court ruled it was "far fetched and chimerical" to suggest that Government employes should be barred from jury service because they might be fearful of losing their jobs if they decided against the Government.

"What has been said applies with equal force to the provision of the statute qualifying those who receive governmental positions and gratuities," the decision added.

Prosecuting officials who feared an adverse decision would prohibit service of more than 40 per cent of the eligible jurors in the city breathed a sigh of relief when they learned the high court had set aside a decision of the Court of Appeals.

Three justices of the Supreme Court—McReynolds, Sutherland and Butler—dissented, holding that the decision of the lower court should have been affirmed, but they prepared no written opinions.

Decision on Larceny Case.

The decision came on an appeal from a petty larceny conviction in Police Court by Raymond Wood, but it blocks appeals in a number of other important cases. One of these involves the conviction of 16 codefendants in the largest liquor conspiracy ring uncovered here since prohibition. Another case involves the conviction of Morris (Dutch) Irwin on a gambling charge.

The decision dooms Thomas Jordan to the electric chair for the murder of Mrs. Lizzie Jaynes, Garden-T-Shoppe cashier. Jordan, who last week was granted a stay while his attorneys applied to the Supreme Court for a writ of certiorari, has exhausted his recourse at law. His only hope is Executive clemency.

Chief Justice Hughes said the court was not "impressed with the contention that the qualification of governmental employes for jury service in criminal cases in the District of Columbia will impair the public respect in which the processes of law should be held."

"On the contrary," he continued, "we think that the spectacle of the exclusion en masse from that service of a body of citizens otherwise highly desirable in point of intelligence and character—solely by reason of their employment by the Government—and the imposition in consequence of a higher burden upon other citizens, whether that exclusion would be in deference to a supposed ancient rule or because of a conclusive presumption of bias against an accused, would constitute a serious reproach to the competency and efficiency of the administration of the system of jury trials."

Law Enacted in 1935.

Because of the difficulty in obtaining jurors who were not in some way beneficiaries of Government pension or pay checks, Congress in August, 1935, enacted a law permitting Government employes to serve on juries.

Justice Hughes in a review of the history of the accepted qualification of jurors pointed out that the ultimate question was not whether Congress has changed a common law rule, but whether, in reason, an absolute disqualification of governmental employes to serve as jurors in criminal cases is necessary to the impartiality of jury.

"Why," the Chief Justice asked, "should it be assumed that a juror, merely because of employment by the Government, would be biased against the accused. In criminal prosecutions the Government is acting simply as the instrument of the public in enforcing legal laws for the protection of society. It is difficult to see why a Government employe, merely by virtue of his employment, is interested in that enforcement either more or less than any good citizen is or should be."

$38,571 to Aircraft Firm.

Mrs. Simpson Offers to Step Aside, Leave Edward Free; Cabinet Awaits King's Action

Divorcee Ready to Give Up Love if Action Aids 'His Majesty.'

Announcement Follows Two Telephone Talks With Monarch.

By the Associated Press.

Cannes, France, Dec. 7.—Dark-eyed Wallis Simpson tonight awaited King Edward's answer to her offer to give up her love for him so that he may retain his throne.

No further comment was forthcoming following the statement with which the former Baltimore belle sought to write finis to the now seemingly ill-fated "l'Affaire Simpson"—choosing a lovelorn exile rather than jeopardize the career of her sovereign sweetheart and the imperial throne of Great Britain.

In her haven of refuge, at the Villa Vieli, a dim light glowed in Mrs. Simpson's bedroom. Faintly silhouetted against it, a slender figure paced back and forth as the American divorcee awaited the next move—Edward's acceptance or his refusal to surrender her love even at the cost of his throne.

Earlier, she had been reported exhausted and on the verge of collapse. Her hosts, Mr. and Mrs. Herman Rogers, of New York, owners of the Villa Viei, had said she would remain in bed two days to recuperate from the ordeal of her two-day flight across France.

In deepest seclusion, guarded by two Scotland Yard detectives and two French gendarmes, Mrs. Simpson reached her fateful decision after talking long and earnestly with King Edward by telephone.

Twice, the cross-channel wires carried the voices of the beleagured lovers. The first time, it was believed, the distraught Wallis, heartsick over the storm aroused by their romance, informed Edward of her determination to go into voluntary exile—only to have Edward plead for time.

Whether he yielded in finality after the second call, or merely accepted her decision as a temporary expedient, is a question likely to be answered by the 42-year-old bachelor monarch himself within the next 24 hours.

If Edward surrenders to the constitutional demands of his Parliament, Mrs. Simpson in all probability will forswear England forever, either return to her native America or pursue a bedouin existence on the continent, many here believed.

To ease the first pangs of separation, she may accept the offer of a long cruise to the South Sea Islands aboard the private yacht of her friend, Mrs. Reginald Fellowes.

The sleek, sea-going craft, named Lady Anne, stood ready with steam up tonight in Cannes Harbor, fueled and provisioned for a long voyage wherever Mrs. Simpson may decide to go in her search for forgetfulness.

Baldwin Says Delay in Crisis Would Be Menace to Empire

By the Associated Press.

London, Dec. 7.—Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin's statement in the House of Commons today concerning the constitutional crisis involving King Edward and Mrs. Wallis Simpson follows:

"I am glad to have occasion to make a further statement on the cabinet's position.

"In considering this whole matter it has always been and remains the earnest desire of the government to afford His Majesty the fullest opportunity of weighing the decision which involves so directly his own future happiness and the interests of all his subjects.

"At the same time they cannot but be aware that any considerable prolongation of the present state of suspense and uncertainty would invoke the risk of gravest injury to the national and imperial interests—and, indeed, no one is more insistent upon this aspect of the situation than His Majesty.

"In view of certain statements which have been made about the relations between the government and the King, I should add that with the exception of the question of morganatic marriage, no advice has been tendered by the government to His Majesty, with whom all my conversations have been strictly personal and informal.

"These matters were not raised first by the government but by His Majesty in conversation with me some weeks ago when he first informed me of his intention to marry Mrs. Simpson whenever she should be free.

"The subject has therefore been for some time in the King's mind and as soon as His Majesty has arrived at the conclusion as to the course he desires to take, he will, no doubt, communicate it to the government in this country and the dominions.

"It will then be for those governments to decide what advice, if any, they would feel it their duty to tender him in the light of his conclusion.

"I cannot conclude this statement without expressing—what the whole house feels—our deep, respectful sympathy with His Majesty at this time."

Monarch Still Insists on Plan to Wed, Baldwin Tells Commons.

Dominions' Views Will Be Weighed

King Will Be Allowed Fullest Consideration of Decision.

By the Associated Press.

London, Dec. 7.—The love of King Edward VIII and Wallis Warfield Simpson was offered up tonight as a sacrifice which Britain's King steadfastly has refused to accept.

In a simple statement, the commoner whom Edward would make his wife, proclaimed to the world her readiness to give up her love so that the King of England could marry according to the dictates of empire.

The once care-free monarch received Mrs. Simpson's avowel of willingness to give him up in the twilight of a day during which he had won more time to work out a way to make her his wife, but not the Queen of England.

The King was firmly resolved to marry Mrs. Simpson, Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin told the House of Commons earlier in the day.

His speech, however, let it be strongly inferred that the question of a "Queen Wallis" never had been broached by either himself or Edward in their many discussions of the situation.

Baldwin's speech thus presented to the empire and the world these official stands in the struggle between the throne and love:

1. Edward's insistence on marrying Mrs. Simpson.

2. Mrs. Simpson's readiness to surrender her love to the crown.

3. The government's refusal to permit a morganatic union.

4. Baldwin's assurance that the dominions, after the King's final decision be made known, would have the opportunity to express their views

Renewed activity at No. 10 Downing street tonight indicated the King's representatives again sought to thresh out the whole matter with Baldwin. Walter T. Monckton, the

The King Is Free —Mrs. Simpson

Cannes, France, Dec. 7 (AP).—Mrs. Wallis Simpson today issued the following statement, which she signed but worded in the third person:

"Throughout the last few weeks she has invariably wished to avoid any action or proposal which might hurt or damage His Majesty or the throne.

"Today her attitude is unchanged and she is willing if such action will solve the problem to withdraw forthwith from a situation that has become unhappy and untenable."

Rebel Artillery Shells Madrid; Attack Awaited

Finnish Envoy's Withdrawal Asked for 'Abuse of Privilege.'

By the Associated Press.

Madrid, Dec. 7.—Madrid's defense officials prepared tonight for a Fascist onslaught expected to follow an artillery bombardment which razed huge blocks of apartment buildings.

As refugees streamed out of the western outskirts of the city, the zone of the most serious shelling, government officials predicted an insurgent attack would come in that sector.

Fighting around Guadalajara, northeast of Madrid, indicated the insurgents were seeking to smash their way into the city from that region also. Twenty-three Fascist planes bombed the area around Guadalajara.

The ministry of state disclosed, meanwhile, that the government had asked immediate withdrawal of the Finnish charge d'affaires in Madrid because of "scandalous abuse of diplomatic privilege."

Charges to Be Presented.

The government, in a message to the Helsingfors administration, asserted the Finnish official threw hand grenades from the windows of his legation at government troops between December 1 and December 3, stored arms and ammunition in the building, and harbored Fascists who were not "entitled to diplomatic refuge."

Informed persons declared Foreign Minister Julio Alvarez del Vayo will present new charges against Germany and Italy before the League of Nations.

They said he will submit what he asserts are photographs of pieces of torpedoes used in an alleged submarine attack on the government cruiser Miguel de Cervantes off Cartagena in November, as well as fragments of bombs which landed in Cartagena during an aerial attack, to sustain his contention that Germany and Italy are aiding the Fascist insurgents.

An air ministry announcement said three insurgent planes which were brought down yesterday were all German pursuit ships.

The western edge of Madrid was becoming daily more and more a city of the dead as civilians lugged their portable belongings into Madrid and left for the south and east in trucks and automobiles.

Irish Jubilant As Controversy Shakes Empire

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Dublin (Tuesday), Dec. 8.—Ireland was described as secretly jubilant and contemplating immediate secession over the domestic imbroglio that besets the British Empire by a high Free State official here today.

Quoting that Fenian watchword—"England's difficulty is Ireland's opportunity"—the official, who took an active part in the Anglo-Irish War, said with tight-lipped satisfaction:

"However we might feel about the young man and lady who have precipitated this momentous crisis we cannot but be elated over the fact that they are giving the empire a dose of its own medicine."

That medicine is partition and disunity, he declared. It was Britain's traditional policy in her relations with Ireland to "divide and conquer," he said.

"We knew the shame of that for centuries," he went on. "Down through the ages venal Irish chieftains abandoned the struggle against the foe—rendered impotent by the Saxon's 'silver' bullets.

Turn About Fair Play.

"There was unity in Ireland under Charles Stewart Parnell and that united front was broken by desperate English politicians who dug into the Irish leader's private life and openly publicized his relations with a married woman."

"Turn about is fair play," the official remarked with a wink, "and now, may the devil take the hindmost."

Whichever way England turns there will be the threat of secession by the states of the commonwealth hanging over her head like a Damoclean sword, the official declared.

"Edward's abdication would mean the installation of a new monarch, but that appointment would have to be approved by each state comprising the commonwealth," he said.

Hinting that Ireland would not give her assent, and that, even if Edward retains his throne, the whole question of Ireland's relation to the commonwealth revolves around a bill soon to be drafted and presented

Treasury Issue Is Overbought 4 Times in Day

By Sidney Olson.

With the public debt pointed toward a new all-time high of $34,440,000,000 yesterday, Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau, closing the books on a $700,000,000 cash offering of 2½ per cent 13-17-year bonds, announced the issue had been oversubscribed more than four times in the first day's sales.

The interest rate was the lowest in United States bond history, except for an issue of consols and one of Panamas, 1909-1919, which were set at 2 per cent but had the added feature of being eligible as collateral for note issues by national banks.

The $700,000,000 issue included $300,000,000 of new money to keep the Treasury balance above the $1,000,000,000 point, and $400,000,000 to retire bills maturing December 15.

The issue was part of a December operation involving a total of $1,486,651,000. The other $786,651,000 was a refunding of obligations maturing December 15 and February 15 with securities bearing lower interest rates.

The Treasury also is issuing $50,000,000 weekly in short-term notes

Roosevelt Sails North Working On His Message

Prepares for Opening of Congress; Peru Urges Joint War Action.

By the Associated Press.

With President Roosevelt at Sea, Dec. 7.—President Roosevelt worked tonight on material for his message to Congress at its opening next month after the cruiser Indianapolis bore him around Brazil's easternmost tip on his way home from a Latin-American peace mission.

The Indianapolis and its companion cruiser, the Chester, performed daylight maneuvers under the President's watch, and tonight searchlight movements were arranged.

The weather was perfect as the vessel passed the half-way point between Montevideo, Uruguay, and Port-of-Spain, Trinidad, where they are due Friday to refuel.

Mr. Roosevelt entered items in a notebook for possible Christmas shopping if he decides to land at Port-of-Spain.

Many steamers were passed by the Indianapolis and the Chester as they sailed smoothly at a speed of 24 knots off Brazil's northeast shore.

Jury Indicts Duke, Says He Harbored Fugitive Hoeppels

A Federal grand jury, sitting in Alexandria, yesterday indicted Jesse C. Duke, Washington attorney, on a charge of unlawfully harboring former Representative John H. Hoeppel, of California, and his son, Charles, while they were fugitives from justice.

A few minutes after the indictment was returned, Duke was brought before the court on a bench warrant issued by Judge Luther B. Way, charging him with handing a sealed communication to Joseph L. Crupper, foreman, as the grand jury was leaving the room after deliberations. Crupper turned the letter over to the court unopened, explaining how it came into his possession. Read before the court, it presented arguments from Duke in defense of his action in the Hoeppel case.

Memory of O'Brien, Gang's Victim, Lapses On Stand Under Eyes of 6 Indicted Mobsters

Joseph Edward O'Brien, dapper 23-year-old victim of a gang-war outbreak here last July, limped on crutches to the witness stand in District Supreme Court yesterday and before the steely gaze of six indicted members of the "Warring Mob" pleaded to be excused from testifying.

Gruffly, Justice Peyton Gordon overruled O'Brien's plea and the nervous witness then repudiated a confession implicating three of the indicted men which police say he made on his hospital bed two days after the shooting.

His eyes roving from time to time to the six alert mobsters, O'Brien confessed to an almost complete lapse of memory and only reluctantly admitted he had been shot.

Threats of gangland vengeance against anyone who testified against the Warring mob which prompted police to place two witnesses under 24-hour guard, created an atmosphere of tension in the courtroom as O'Brien, the Government's star witness, limped to the stand.

Three bullets shattered the bones in O'Brien's legs when he was attacked by an armed mob in the 200 block of Second street southeast on the night of July 21. Informed he might be crippled for life, O'Brien in the hospital cursed his assailants by name and vowed vengeance.

Assistant District Attorney Irvin Goldstein asked O'Brien if he was in the 200 block of Second street southeast the night of July 21 and the witness answered, mechanically: "I stand on my constitutional rights and refuse to answer that question on the grounds it might incriminate me."

The defendants—Charles (Rags) Warring, Clarence (Cocky) Ware, Samuel S. (Monty) Montgomery, George F. (Teddy) Tear, John (Jack) Sweeney and Joseph S. Bond—relaxed and shifted their eyes to Justice Gordon.

"I don't think that's a good reason. Answer the question," brusquely commanded Justice Gordon.

O'Brien admitted he was at the scene of the shooting and Goldstein asked him if he recalled that two cars drove up just before he was shot.

"Your honor," pleaded O'Brien, nervously twisting his hands, "do I understand I have to answer all these questions—that I don't have any rights?"

"Yes, you have rights," Justice Gordon said, "but I'll decide what questions incriminate you. Go ahead and answer."

Then followed a battle of wits between Glodstein and O'Brien, with the witness seeking every

Philippine Flood Sweeps Thousands Away, Army Says

By the Associated Press.

Manila (Tuesday), Dec. 8.—The Philippine Army reported today that "thousands of persons were carried away" in a flood which swept the rich Cagayan River Valley in northern Luzon Island.

Manilans said the official army report, which stated "thousands of persons were missing," indicated a catastrophe overshadowing any in the history of the islands.

Reports from the military commander of Isabela Province, in northwest Luzon, said "the greatest flood in the history" of the islands hit the valley December 4 at 4 a. m.

He said at least 54 towns were inundated and expressed fear scores of others were deluged.

"Thousands of persons," the commander reported, "were carried away as the flood waters swept toward Aparri and the sea."

Family of 6—a 7th Expected—Appeals to Toy Fund for Aid

Christmas, 1936, may be the saddest day in the year for one of southwest Washington's poorest homes.

Several days ago the mother of an Independence avenue family wrote to the Toy and Doll Fund, asking sympathetic readers to help Santa Claus remember her three girls and one boy. But yesterday's letter asked for further aid. For Christmas Day will probably see the family with a new baby.

The problem of gifts for her children became only more acute with this realization. So this family's mother has again appealed to The Post's readers to see that her children—Jack, Catherine, Helen, Betty and the new baby—are not neglected this Christmas.

Jack and Catherine and Helen and Betty, themselves, aren't expecting much for Christmas. An old toy or doll, or even an out-dated game can mean the difference between a cold, heartless day, and a truly Merry Christmas. But their real concern is for their mother. With little or no baby clothes on hand, the family can not afford anything for the new brother or sister.

The father works for the WPA. But over half his monthly wages is needed for rent. What little remains goes for food, and sometimes a little is left for clothing. There is no money to prepare for an addition to the family, and least of all for Chistmas gifts for the four other children.

But help can be given to this family of six. Toys and games and dolls, or even cash contributions themselves, can be sent to The Post Toy and Doll Fund.

the remainder went for the other securities, most for the Cleveland Railway Co. Ball owned 36 2-3 per cent of the Mid-America company and Tomlinson owned 28.3 per cent.

The remainder was owned by the Midland Bank of Cleveland.

Thus Ball, immediately after the sale, obtained nominal control of the properties. He revealed near the close of the committee session yesterday that he had recently purchased most of the Mid-America stock held by Tomlinson, thus giving him almost complete ownership of the company.

But, until the recent death of O. P. Van Sweringen, Ball's control was only nominal, because Van Sweringen held an option to buy a majority of the Mid-America stock at $1 a share and an irrevocable proxy to vote the stock. With his death the agreements ended, making Ball "heir" to the business.

Ball's cash equity in the veritable empire is problematical, because in assuming ownership he also has assumed its liabilities. It is estimated that the properties are worth more than $3,000,000,000, but the value of the common stock probably is comparatively small.

Nevertheless, Ball is in a position to exercise control, if he so desires, over all the property, which includes a total of 286 corporations. He denied to the Senate committee that he has any desire to dictate the affairs of such an extensive business.

Senator Burton K. Wheeler (Democrat), Montana, chairman of the committee, remarked at the close of the session that Ball had obtained it all "for the price of two good locomotives."

In opening the hearing, Wheeler said the inquiry would cover all aspects of railroad financing and that it was the intention of the committee "to conduct these hearings objectively toward the welfare of the American transportation system."

"Our object," he said, "is to be able intelligently to recommend to Congress wise and workable legislation if we find that legislation is needed to improve the prosperity of our railroads and their abaility to function most effectively."

Deal Related.

Ball was called as the first witness. He said that on August 10, 1935, Tomlinson called him by telephone from Cleveland and arranged for O. P. Van Sweringen to meet him in Muncie the following day. He said Van Sweringen told him he was in a critical financial situation and that the banks were planning to sell him out.

"He said," Ball testified, "that he was looking for someone to buy the securities and he wanted to know whether I would buy them. He said that the purchase might be made with $2,500,000 and with such bank help as might be obtained. He told me that if I didn't help him he did not know what he would do.

"'I wouldn't know where to go,' he said. 'I am stopped.'

"'You keep your head up,' I told him."

Ball said he told Van Sweringen that he would "think as fast as I could" about the proposal. Meanwhile he said he talked the matter over with To...linson, who agreed to put up one-third of the money if someone else would come in. Two days later, Ball said, he went to Cleveland for a further conference with Van Sweringen. The result was the formation of the Mid-America Corporation, with Ball holding two-thirds of the 15,000 shares of stock.

The Muncie manufacturer went to the auction in New York September 30 and watched his representatives bid in the properties.

On the wall of the committee room was a big chart showing the interlocking connections of the 286 corporations. Ball stood before the chart as Max Lowenthal, chief counsel for the committee, explained it. Repeatedly he professed ignorance of the nature or location of a given corporation.

Holdings Immense.

"Did you know you were buying this vast empire?" Wheeler asked.

"I knew I would be in a lot of things when I bought it," Ball replied.

Ball admitted that he did not know where some of his coal companies operate, whether certain minor railroads were steam or electric and whether another company was a bus line or engaged in some other business.

Wheeler fixed upon $3,183,285,783 as the book value of the properties controlled by the Alleghany Corporation, against which he listed liabilities of $2,994,304,324. Ball said he did not know whether the figures were accurate.

When the hearing resumed in the afternoon Ball testified that he put up $1,343,000 for the purchase of the Van Sweringen securities, that Tomlinson supplied $671,700, and that the remainder was borrowed.

Later he testified that he had bought from Tomlinson 5,400 shares of Mid-America common stock and 4,050 shares of the company's preferred stock for $550,000. This gives Ball ownership of 14,050 of the company's 15,000 common shares. Tomlinson now owns 195½ shares of common stock and 261 shares of preferred. The Midland Bank owns 1,006 shares of preferred and 754½ shares of common.

Wheeler told Ball that the market value of the Alleghany stock was $2,838,676 on the day he bought it and that it now was $9,806,337. He gave the total market value of the securities on the day they were purchased as $5,745,219 and the present market value as $13,492,294. This, however, did not include a number of stocks, bonds and notes which are unlisted. Ball said he did not know whether the figures were accurate.

Ball told the committee that he and Tomlinson were willing to put up between $3,000,000 and $3,500,000 for the securities at the sale and said that he did not believe they would be able to obtain them for $3,121,000, the amount they finally paid. He insisted there was no prearrangement as to the amount.

"For the Alleghany Corporation you paid less than 14 cents a share when the market was 1⅜ (1.37½)," Wheeler said. "Didn't you think it strange that J. P. Morgan and other financiers were willing to sell for $3,121,000 stocks that were worth $5,745,000?" Wheeler asked.

"Yes, I wondered," said Ball, "but I didn't ask why."

Ball said he merely saw the transaction as an opportunity to make some money.

"Didn't you think it strange that they would turn over to you for $274,000 the Alleghany Corporation which controlled the 23,000 miles of railroads, bus lines, coal companies, shipping company and even a peach orchard, together with the right to control other people's property and other people's money? You can now name the officials of these companies, buy supplies and dictate to them generally."

Low Interest Rates on Treasury's Security Offering Stirs Fear on 'Easy Money' Policies.

By Franklyn Waltman

OVERSUBSCRIPTION by more than four times of the Treasury's week-end security offering at the lowest interest rates on record for comparable issues may cause some jubilation in the Treasury, but it will be received in financial circles with some misgivings for fear that it may encourage the Administration to persist in its present easy money policies.

WALTMAN.

The Treasury's action in setting new record lows in interest rates on its securities, at a time when the situation calls for a tightening of money rates, seems incongruous. Certainly it is not in harmony with the general talk within Administration circles of the necessity for taking steps to curb inflationary tendencies and prevent any kind of a boom from developing.

Borrowing money as cheaply as possible is good business for a private borrower. But the Treasury cannot be regarded as a private borrower seeking the best possible bargain in the money market. Its financial policies shape the general course of economic and financial trends throughout the country. Consequently the Treasury in framing a financial operation should consider not only what is best for its immediate purpose on a dollars and cents basis, but also what is best for the country.

* * * *

There is a great deal of expert opinion that continuance of an easy money policy is not the best thing for this country. Dr. Lionel D. Edie, consulting economist of some note, discussing the present situation before the Investment Bankers of America, showed disapproval of it by asserting that "whatever the mandate of 27,000,000 votes may mean to different people, it would be stretching things a long way to make it mean a mandate to keep money rates at levels as extremely, as abnormally and as dangerously low as those now prevailing."

Dr. Edie's remarks were regarded as a reply to those last week of SEC Chairman James M. Landis, who warned the investment bankers that they must conduct themselves in order to prevent a recurrence of a boom and 1929 and that if they failed to do so, the public would hold them responsible.

"Whoever is responsible for keeping money rates cheap is responsible for not curbing the boom," Dr. Edie asserted pointedly.

The financial economist, however, was looking beyond a boom when he projected the thought that many of the banks of this country, loaded with Government bonds, would be in a precarious position when money conditions harden and bring interest rates higher than those now established. The result would be a depreciation of the value of Government bonds unless halted by some kind of price pegging operations on the part of the Treasury.

"When money rates turn, who is going to be the goat in the eyes of the public?" asked Dr. Edie. He gravely doubted the ability of the Government to maintain some of its low interest securities at par, once money rates tighten up.

The seriousness of this potential situation was suggested by Dr. Edie when he said bond prices have become so high that if interest rates return halfway to their levels of the 1920s a large part of the capital and surplus of many banks would be wiped out, and that if interest rates went the entire distance the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation would become insolvent.

The Treasury seems to be intent on making the task of the Government in curbing inflationary and boom tendencies more difficult—and those struggling with the problem find it already difficult enough.

Unusually fortunate in his publicity breaks, President Roosevelt seems to have lost his luck in his Latin-American peace venture. His journey to Buenos Aires and the peace conference there has become a secondary story to l'affaire Simpson.

The day on which the President made his momentous speech, he managed to dominate the news. But it was only for a day and the Buenos Aires story dropped back into a secondary place. If Mr. Roosevelt had not dramatized the Buenos Aires conference by going there personally it probably would not have made any dent on public consciousness.

Even though most newspapers continue to give a good play to the Latin-American conference—both as to front-page position and space—few seem interested in anything except what the King says to the Prime Minister and what Mrs. Simpson says to the King. Thus public attention here is being distracted from a really important development on the international stage at a time when an informed and active public opinion should be supporting the President's efforts.

Judge Upholds Insurance Tax Of Security Act

U. S. Court Ruling Terms Bill Uniform, Proper Excise Levy.

By the Associated Press.

Boston, Dec. 7.—The unemployment insurance tax of the Federal social security act was declared constitutional today by Federal Judge George C. Sweeney, in a decision which Federal Building sources said was the first of its kind in the country.

Judge Sweeney ruled in the case of George P. Davis, of Waltham, a stockholder of the Boston & Maine Railroad, who sought an injunction to prevent the railroad from paying the tax, that: "It is a valid tax. It does not exceed the powers of Congress. It is a tax for the general welfare of the Nation."

After the injunction was denied and the bill dismissed, Davis announced he would appeal, and Assistant United States Attorney Arthur L. Murray said it would be entered in the United States Circuit Court of Appeals before December 15.

"Judge Sweeney Ruled."

"The act with 4rKinsCdi HT RA dealing," Judge Sweeney ruled, "purports to be nothing other than an excise tax, and purports to be guided by the limitation of uniformity. There is no contention by anyone that it is a direct tax, and therefore subject to the limitation of apportionment. * * *

"Holding as I do that the tax does not go beyond the authority of Congress to impose this tax as an excise, it follows that there is no confiscation as urged by the petitioner, unless the tax exceeds the limitations imposed by the Constitution. * * *

"As to the question of uniformity the tax in question is laid on every business throughout the United States without regard to geographical location or intrinsic value. There is no question raised that the tax does not cover all industries of a similar nature wherever located."

Five Asphyxiated In Tourist Cabin Sealed Up by Ice

Fayetteville, Ark., Dec. 7 (AP).—Three young women and two men died of asphyxiation in a tightly closed tourist camp cabin early today, victims of a sudden drop in temperature which sealed window and doorsills with ice.

John Butler, camp operator, found the bodies. A gas fire was burning brightly and all windows were closed fast. Five empty beer bottles were found. The victims had on underclothing only.

They were identified as Bert Atkinson, 45, and Bill Reed, 30, both of Fayetteville, and Mrs. Mabel Todd, 37, Huntsville, Ark.; Miss Alice Taylor, 19, and Miss Jewell Hudson, also of Fayetteville.

Coroner Riggs said Mrs. Todd was a divorcee and the mother of two children. He said both Atkinson and Reed were married and had children.

'Lamb in His Bosom' Author Wins Divorce

Waycross, Ga., Dec. 7 (AP).—Caroline Miller, pretty Pultizer prize novelist, won an uncontested divorce today from Will D. Miller, educator who married her after a schoolroom romance. Mrs. Miller charged mental cruelty and incompatibility. A fews weeks ago she was granted temporary custody of her three sons, two of them twins. Mrs. Miller won fame four years ago by writing "Lamb in his Bosom," a best seller of Georgia backwoods life.

Supreme Court Upholds Laws Of 2 States Barring Cut Prices

to pass on two appeals from a decision by the Northern Illinois Federal District Court upholding the legislation. The case will go back to the circuit court of appeals, over which it had been jumped.

Constitutionality of the Illinois "fair trade" law had been questioned by the Dearborn Distributing Co., enjoined by a State court from selling "Seagram" and "Kessler" branded liquor below fixed prices in Illinois, and by McNeil's liquor store in Chicago, enjoined from selling "Schenley Products" at less than the standard price.

Sutherland said other cases arising from the California law presented substantially the same issues and upheld both the Illinois and California statutes.

While a retailer may own a standard product, "they do not own the mark or the good will that the mark symbolizes," said Sutherland.

Defending a State's right to permit procedure to contract for the selling price of standard brands, and prohibit cutting below that price, the court ruled:

"We are here not dealing with a commodity alone, but with a commodity plus the brand or trademark which it bears as evidence of its origin and of the quality of the commodity for which the brand or trade-mark stands.

"And good will is property in a very real sense, injury to which, like injury to any other species of property, is a proper subject for legislation. Good will is a valuable contributing aid to business—sometimes the most valuable contributing asset of the producer or distributor of commodities. And distinctive trade-marks, labels and brands, are legitimate aids to the creation or enlargement of such good will."

The court denied the Illinois and California statutes either attempted to "fix prices" or delegate that power to private persons.

"It contains no element of compulsion but simply legalizes their acts, leaving them free to enter into the authorized contract or not as they may see fit."

The court saw "no authority for holding that prices in respect of 'identified' goods may not be fixed under legislative leave by contract between the parties."

"The primary aim of the law is to protect the property—namely, the good will—of the producer, which he still owns. The price restriction is adopted as an appropriate means to that perfectly legitimate end, and not as an end in itself."

Cut Prices Charged.

Sutherland said the Illinois liquor stores, appealing from lower court decisions, "sold the products in question at cut prices—that is to say, at prices below those stipulated—and continued to do so after the manufacturer's demand that it cease such practice. The result of such price cutting was a diminution of sales during the price-cutting period suffered by appellee and retailers other than appellant."

He said there is nothing to prevent retailers from removing the trade-mark and selling the product at any price they choose, so long as the brand's good will was not used as an aid.

No detailed ruling was made on the California case, which was appealed to the court by "The Pep Boys, Manny, Moe and Jack, of California," and by Clarence G. Kunsman, owner of a Beverly Hills drug store.

Only eight of the nine justices participated in the decisions, with Justice Stone still confined by illness.

In referring the Government's request for a stay in public utility holding company litigation back to the Federal District Court, the justices reversed a ruling by the District Court of Appeals declining to delay trial of North American Co. and American Water Works & Electric Co. suits until the Government's E. B. & S. suit is determined.

Pointing out that much time has elapsed since the District court's original stay order was issued, the court unanimously held "there must be a new appraisal of the facts by the court whose function it is to exercise discretion."

The court admonished that no unreasonable postponement should be granted, contending that "an order which is to continue by its terms for an immoderate stretch is not to be upheld as moderate because conceivably the court that made it may be persuaded at a later time to undo what it has done."

In refusing to overthrow the uniform accounting system prescribed by the Communications Commission for telephone companies, the court said evidence was lacking "that the expense of revising the accounts will lay so heavy a burden upon the companies as to overpass the bounds of reason."

The American Telephone & Telegraph Co., 28 Bell system subsidiaries and 7 independent companies had argued the Communications Commission's new accounting method would set up a false rate base and they would suffer "serious financial losses." The court's ruling sustained a New York Federal District Court's refusal to grant an injunction against the order.

New Deal cases left undecided as the court resumed arguments included the Duke Power Co.'s challenge of PWA power loans and grants to municipalities, and suits involving constitutionality of the neutrality law and the silver purchase act.

Farm Loan Men Study Land Bank

Baltimore, Dec. 7 (AP).—Officers of the National Farm Loan Associations of four Middle Atlantic States will study the operations of the Federal Land Bank of Baltimore this week.

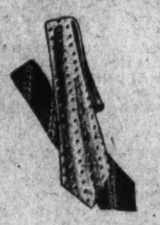

Officials of the bank will meet tomorrow and Wednesday with the presidents and secretary-treasures of 30 associations from Maryland, Pennsylvania and West Virginia. A similar group from Virginia and West Virginia will be entertained here on Thursday and Friday.

The purpose of the conferences is to give the associations' officers an opportunity to acquaint themselves with the operations of the local bank and to discuss the bank's financial condition and problems.

Under the new service allowance plan, responsibility for collections of all loans made by the bank, through the associations, has been placed with the secretary-treasurers of these organizations. It also provides for a revision of the accounting system in each association.

Roosevelt Sails North Working On His Message

ican republics together against foreign aggression was proposed to the Inter-American Peace Conference tonight by Peru.

It was submitted shortly after the Chilean delegation presented an American arms-limitation project whichc neutral observers believed had little chance of approval because of the threat seen by delegates in the European armament race.

The Peruvian neutrality project provides that in case of war between a country in the Western Hemisphere and one outside it, signatories of the agreement could aid in arming and supplying food to the American power, but would suspend all traffic with the foreign nation.

Delegates recalled that President Roosevelt, in his address at the parley's initial session, pictured the American republics standing "shouling "shoulder to shoulder" against a foreign attack.

U. S. Has Neutral Plan.

The United States delegation yesterday submitted a neutrality proposal, but it dealt largely with inter-American disputes, although providing for consultation among American nations "whenever emergencies arise which affect common interests."

Uruguay offered a plan for a five-year inter-American tariff truce and urged all the American republics to make bi-lateral trade treaties with other American nations.

The Chilean proposal to confine armaments of the 21 American republics to bare necessities of defense encountered a fiery attack from Gen. Jose Maria Moncada, of Nicaragua, who declared it was dangerous—"with Europe armed to the teeth—indeed, armed to the very eyes."

The United States and Argentina were understood also to oppose the plan on the ground that arms limitation could be effetcive only on a world-wide scale.

Stalemate Seen.

The resolution came up at a session of the arms limitation committee, and observers believed it might never get beyond that group. A full session of the conference was not expected until next week.

The committee on juridicial problems got itself tangled in a debate on a resolution to honor great American jurists.

Some observers saw the Chilean arms limitation plan as aimed indirectly at Chile's neighbor, Argentina, which has been improving its army, navy and air force.

The aged Gen. Moncada, former president of Nicaragua, asked the delegates in an impressive speech:

"Can we tell the United States she should limit her armaments while all the world powers are arming madly?

for the next six weeks to take care of cash requirements.

The total of $600,000,000 in new financing operations will lift the debt from $33,840,000,000 to a new high of $34,440,000,000 which will be $100,000,000 more than the previous high reached in last June with the soldier bonus payments.

Secretary Morgenthau, in announcing the four-time oversubscription of the bonds, said:

"This means, in regard to low money rates, that the issue was well priced for the needs of the investing public.

"We don't know whether the little fellow is subscribing or not, but we're very much interested."

The latter remark referred to the announcement Sunday of discontinuation of the former policy of allowing small investors to subscribe to new Treasury issues up to $5,000 before making securities available, without restriction, to financial institutions. Under the old rule preferential treatment was given to small purchasers, but so many "chiselers" took advantage of the situation that all buyers are to be treated alike hereafter.

Additional financing is expected before March 15, however, the due date of income tax receipts, which are expected to be the largest in history.

The President's last budget summation predicted the possible need of another $500,000,000 in new money beyond the $750,000,000 he had previously believed necessary. Thus there will be considerable additional Treasury new financing before the end of the current fiscal year in June 30, 1937.

Cummings Tours D.C. Jail, Finds It Inadequate, But Holds Problem One for District, Not Him

Attorney General Homer Cummings went jail inspecting yesterday at the District hoosegow and saw a lot of interesting sights. What will come of it all is hard to say.

Among the sights was a colored man named John Homer Cummings, condemned to die for murder in a holdup. John Homer Cummings kept right on reading a book and did not bother to turn around and inspect Attorney General Homer Cummings.

While the Attorney General's office admittedly has no power or authority to remedy overcrowding at the District Jail, the Attorney General put on his pince-nez and said he would confer with Commissioner Hazen "sometime this week."

Prisoners at the jail said they are getting tired of being inspected. Several delegations have trooped through the place during the last year, with a horde of photographers flashing bulbs unexpectedly and a general disturbance of the jail quiet resulting.

Cummings (the Attorney General) was requested to pose in the electric chair, but he declined, saying "You've got me locked up—you won't get me in the chair." This was a reference to pictures taken of him and Sanford Bates, director of the Bureau of Prisons, while the two were being admitted to the death cage.

The Attorney General did, however tentatively stick two outstretched fingers toward two cable sockets from which current flows to the electric chair. But he suddenly changed his mind about putting the fingers in, and hastily thrust them in his pants pocket.

Cummings expressed surprise that the electric chair is set up in the dining room for executions. T. M. Rives, jail superintendent, explained that ordinarily it is kept out of sight in an alcove and brought into the dining room only because a large space is needed for witnesses. Cummings had no comment. The custom of executing condemned men in the room where prisoners eat next day has been widely criticized.

Briefly, this is what the Attorney General did: Got locked in a cell by Capt. M. M. Barnard, superintendent of District penal institutions, and shouted "Let me out! Let me out!" saw a prisoner happily reading "Underworld Nights," saw the dentist chair, saw the women's wards alone, with the press barred; stepped gingerly over a coal pile to look at an old boiler, looked at one block of cells and saw steaks, olives, hot biscuits, fresh green beans in the kitchen.

After the inspection tour, Cummings stated for the record:

"This is an old institution. It was built in 1876. It would not be proper for me to speak definitely of any impressions I have of this institution. In the first place the Attorney General's office has no authority over prisons.

"The institution is manifestly inadequate. Many things are old and outmoded. The outstanding difficulty is overcrowding. Then there is a lack of facilities for exercise. Administration is difficult.

"However, obtaining funds for improvements runs into other District problems."

Yesterday there were 566 prisoners in a building which Rives said should accommodate 500. He added, however, that there was space for more than 500 "if every available bit of room is used."

U. S. Employes Eligible Jurors, Decision Holds

Supreme Court Upholds 1935 Law by 6 to 3; Balks Appeals.

Fenton W. Booth held that the company was entitled to the sum asked because the Government, in ordering 110 airplanes from other manufacturers, had used Martin designs.

The largest award involved in the 34 cases decided yesterday was $1,592,464, to Carlo de Luca, an Italian shipping magnate, as additional compensation for the Government's taking over two 7,000-ton vessels under construction in this country when the United States entered the World War. The plaintiff previously had accepted a settlement of $802,100 but in July, 1921, asked for a further settlement on grounds he had been coerced into accepting the previous one. The court agreed with the Italian shipper that he had received inadequate compensation and allowed an additional $777,065 plus accrued interest of $815,399.

The Georgia Wholesale Co., of Macon, Ga., was awarded $492,316 out of $1,010,594 it had asked for loss of 223,897 pairs of Army shoes. The shoes were issued to CCC camps by the Army in 1933 and the Georgia firm claimed it had already contracted to purchase all surplus trench shoes. The Government violated its contract, the firm asserted, in withdrawing the 223,000 pairs for the CCC.

Rebukes Accounting Office.

The Court of Claims "cracked down" on the General Accounting Office yesterday with the charge that it arbitrarily refuses to follow the lew in denying expense accounts of Government employes.

The court's rebuke was administered in its decision on the claim of Maj. Frank T. McCabe, U. S. A., retired, who sought $256.05 as travel allowance from Fort Francis E. Warren, Wyo., to his home at Newton, Mass.

In its decision granting Maj. McCabe's claim, the court said:

"This decision has repeatedly, in previous cases, been decided in favor of the plaintiff. • • • There is no reason why the plaintiff should have been put to the expense of bringing suit to recover what is unquestionably due him except the arbitrary action of the General Accounting Office in refusing to follow the law as it has been announced by the court in previous decisions."

Maj. McCabe was ordered in June, 1933, to leave his post and proceed to his home to await retirement. Later he entered a claim for transportation, which the General Accounting Office refused to pay.

Temperature Drop To 20° Is Forecast For Capital Today

Occasional snow flurries, frequent cold rains and sleet fell generally over Virginia yesterday as the District experienced a gloomy winter day, with the mercury falling to a low 28 beneath overcast skies.

Today in Washington will be fair and colder, the Weather Bureau predicted last night. Temperature was scheduled to dip to 20 before dawn. Yesterday's high was 46 at 5 a. m.

Virginia's greatest chill settled over the northern part of the State. A temperature of 36 was recorded at Fredericksburg, the Associated Press reported, with 34 at Petersburg, and sleet and snow leaving a slushy footing in Richmond.

In many parts of the Nation subzero weather caused widespread suffering and increased traffiv hazards. Coldest spot in the country was Warroad, Minn., with 33 below. Sixteen inches of snow fell in Montana. Snowfall was recorded in Iowa, Minnesota, Missouri and parts of Michigan and Illinois. Windstorms left heavy damage and more than 40 injured in Texas, Arkansas, Mississippi and Alagama.

Cooper Loses 3-Year Battle To Regain Bank

Supreme Court Refuses to Review U. S. Savings Receivership Case.

The United States Savings Bank and its president, Wade H. Cooper, lost yesterday in the Supreme Court a three-year fight to obtain the discharge of a Federal receiver.

The Supreme Court denied the request for a review of lower court decisions which had upheld the Treasury's appointment of Wilbur H. Zepp as conservator.

Yesterday's action concludes a bitter battle during which Cooper steadfastly maintained that a plot was engineered to deprive him and his bank of its most valuable assets.

Since the Nation-wide bank moratorium in March of 1933 numerous legal steps have been taken by Cooper to dislodge the receiver. Suit was started June 28, 1934, in the District Supreme Court to set aside the appointment of Zepp and restore the bank and its assets to its officers, directors and stockholders. It was claimed the bank was solvent. On July 18 of the same year Cooper asked permission of the court to file a supplemental bill, and about the same time Secretary Morgenthau filed a motion to have Cooper's original bill dismissed. The Government contended the bank was "insolvent and unable to pay its just and legal debts."

The lower court denied Cooper the right to file his supplemental bill and simultaneously granted Morgenthau's motion to dismiss the original bill.

An appeal was taken to the United States Court of Appeals, where the lower court ruling was affirmed.

In July, 1934, the conservator announced a payoff of 65 per cent to depositors, the first dividend amounting to $1,000,000. Shortly thereafter Attorney Carter B. Keene was appointed as new conservator. Cooper kept up his battle to have the receiver removed.

After a second reversal, in the Court of Appeals, he and the bank took the fight to the United States Supreme Court, where they lost for a third and final time yesterday.

G.O.P. Heads Weigh 'Rebels' in Senate

Senate Republicans began conferring yesterday on the problem of how to treat the Western Independents, some of whom designate themselves as Republicans, while some use other party labels.

The immediate problem is whether to include them within the Republican organization in the Senate, giving them assignments to committees through the party, as in the past.

Leaders are being urged by some to purge the party ranks of all those who have wavered in recent years. But tentative decision has been reached to extend the party cloak.

Senators involved include Norris, of Nebraska, now an Independent; La Follette, of Wisconsin, now a Progressive, and the two Farmer-Laborites, Shipstead and Lundeen, of Minnesota; Senators Borah (Republican), Idaho; Johnson (Republican), California; Frazier (Republican), North Dakota; Nye (Republican), North Dakota, and Norbeck (Republican), South Dakota, all of whom have supported opposing Presidential candidates or have remained silent during recent campaigns.

Their Picture Will Be Post's Toy Fund Attraction

Those hilarious two fun-makers, Laurel and Hardy, whose uproarious two-reel comedy, "Tit for Tat," is one of the many features of a special morning show at Loew's Capitol Theater, this Saturday, at 9:30 a. m. Five other film shorts—starring Mickey Mouse and Donald Duck, Our Gang, Pop-Eye the Sailor, and Walt Disney's Robber Kitten—fill out a program that includes the Loew's Boys Band of 50 pieces, an organloge with community singing by the audience of youngsters, Dave Apollon and singing and dancing artists from his All-Star Parade of 1937, and Art Godfrey and Arch McDonald of WJSV, as joint masters-of-ceremonies. Admission to the show is one new toy or doll, these to be contributed to The Washington Post's 1936 Toy and Doll Fund. Doors at the Capitol will open Saturday morning at 9 a. m.

And anything specially given for the Independence avenue family will be sure to reach them. Just label the gift for the "family with the new baby" and it will find its way to the four children and their new baby brother or sister.

Meanwhile, other gifts should be labeled "For Arch" or "For Arthur," depending on whether you prefer to see Arch McDonald or Arthur Godfrey interpret the "Dance of the Dying Swan" at Loew's Capitol Theater Saturday morning. The two WJSV announcers are asking their respective radio audiences to send in money and toys to the fund, with each one wagering his audience will be more responsive. The loser has agreed to render the famous Pavlowa dance at a special children's matinee Saturday.

If you cannot find time to bring your toy directly to The Post Building, leave it in the special boxes at any Peoples drug store, or in the baskets at Loew's Capitol, Columbia and Palace theaters. Or by telephoning DEcatur 5130 you can arrange for a Terminal taxicab to call for the gift without charge.

Ickes Advocates Continued PWA To Bar Slumps

Administrator Warns We Must Be Ready for Next Depression.

Wide discretionary powers for the administrator of a permanent public works general staff were called for by PWA Administrator Ickes in a radio address last night.

Dropping the fixed 45 per cent of a project's cost which the Government grants, with the percentage based on actual needs of a community, was suggested, along with a proposal that PWA be permitted to take over bonds of a municipality that was "being bludgeoned into paying an exorbitant rate of interest."

Speaking on the future of public works, Secretary Ickes pointed to the projects carried out or being carried out and voiced pride in them. He declared that if another depression should fall upon the country "we must not be unprepared as we were when the last one struck us."

Would Complete Program.

He said "as an irreducible minimum" there should be a permanent public works general staff with a reservoir "of well-considered, carefully planned projects, work on which could be undertaken as soon as the necessity arose and money was made available."

For the immediate future he held it necessary to round out the present program by making allocations for limited additional projects, but said he would not favor expending more Federal money in any sections that are "as prosperous as they ever have been, or even more prosperous."

He proposed flexibility in the percentage of a project's cost, which the Federal Government would grant. Instead of the present flat 45 per cent, Ickes said the finanical ability of the local community should be the basis in determining the Federal grant, which might be "30 per cent or 20 per cent or 10 per cent."

Advocates Low Rate.

"In view of the fact that interest rates are much lower than when the public works program was inaugurated," he said, "it may well be that it would be proper for us to lower our rates correspondingly. Especially might it be proper to decrease our interest rates if our grants are reduced."

Authority for the PWA to take over bonds of municipalities to finance improvements was suggested.

In low-rent housing, Ickes said, the Government was willing "to blaze the way," but he declared the time has come when municipal governments "must realize that the chief responsibility is their own, a responsibility, however, which should be shared by the States and even by private citizens."

Meanwhile the Bureau of Labor Statistics yesterday announced that a two-year survey had determined that two and one-half times as many men were given employment indirectly by the PWA program as were actually employed on the projects themselves. Production and transportation of materials used in the actual work, it was reported, provided the indi[illegible] employment. The $539,000,000 spent for PWA materials was credited with creating 741,000,000 man-hours of employment in private industry, while the direct employment for the same period amounted to 299,000,000 man-hours.

White House Christmas Morn To Be Like That in Other Homes

Roosevelt Grandchildren to Join Early Scramble for Presents in President's Room; Greetings Mailed Throughout World.

By the United Press.

On trains, airplanes and ocean liners scores of tinted pasteboards—highly coveted by recipients—moved tonight toward the homes of rich and poor throughout the world.

The cards bore annual Christmas greetings from President and Mrs. Roosevelt to friends and officials at home and abroad. The design, as in years past, was kept secret. It was chosen personally by Mr. and Mrs. Roosevelt.

White House Christmas plans were made public as Mrs. Roosevelt left for New York to complete her shopping. She will return to Washington next Monday to greet the President upon his return from his South American peace mission. Both will plunge immediately into perfecting the White House Christmas plans.

The family will begin gathering here a few days before the celebration. When the President sits down to read Dickens' Christmas carol around him are expected to be grouped his 82-year-old mother, Sarah; four sons, James, Elliott, Franklin, jr., and John; two daughters-in-law, Mrs. James Roosevelt and Mrs. Elliott Roosevelt; six grandchildren, Anna Eleanor Dall, Curtis Roosevelt Dall, Sara Delano Roosevelt, Ruth Chandler Roosevelt, Kate Roosevelt and 6-months-old Elliott Roosevelt, jr.

The day before Christmas will be a busy one for the First Lady. Early in the morning she will distribute presents to hundreds of poor children at the Central Union Mission and Salvation Army headquarters.

On Christmas Eve the Roosevelt family will visit an adjacent park, where the President will light the community Christmas tree. There the Chief Executive is expected to renew his plea for peace among men.

Back at the White House the family will get an early dinner, the President afterward will read Dickens' Christmas carol and then listen to carols from Girl Scouts, who will be invited in for a nip of hot cocoa.

Sleepy-eyed grandchildren then will hang up their stockings at their granddad's mantelpiece, hustle off to bed, and the Nation's first citizen will become, for a moment, just another Santa Claus. He will supervise the dressing of the family Christmas tree and the placing of each package.

At dawn the White House will be turned into just an ordinary home on Christmas Day. Children and grown-ups will rush pellmell into the President's room to get their gifts.

FROM KEEL TO TRUCK

The Ship's Carpenter works in steel today. In Cunard White Star liners you'll hear the ring of his hammer, testing gear high on the foremast. On deck, he overhauls the anchor cable. Below, the ballast tanks are his charge. As in days of sail, he is responsible for the soundness, the functioning of a hundred and more parts of the hull and superstructure. His job carries him everywhere... from keel to truck. The phrase is eloquent, not merely of the Carpenter's duties alone. It suggests much of the thoroughness of the British tradition itself.

From your first hours aboard a Cunard White Star ship, you realize that this tradition means more than seamanship...a hospitality, characteristic of the land of Britain and exemplified in these ships in innumerable ways: in your deck steward's deftness at impromptu catering, in the little touches which stamp the bedroom steward as a finished valet. They, too, share in a heritage, deepened by the Line's century of experience.

Hanging Asked For D.C. Grocer In Assault Case

J. H. Burns Hears Woman Tell Maryland Jury of Attack in Auto.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Rockville, Md., Dec. 7.—A jury in circuit court here tonight was asked to direct the death penalty for John Henry Burns, prominent Washington grocer, on trial charged with criminally attacking a pretty dark-haired 27-year-old woman bookkeeper for a District clothing store.

The penalty, prescribed by law for the alleged offense in Maryland, where execution is by hanging, was asked by State's Attorney David Pugh in his closing plea to the jury.

The case was to go to the jurors early this evening after hearing final argument by attorneys for the defense, State Senator Stedman Prescott and James O'Shea, of Washington.

Burns twisted her arm and threatened to beat her to death with a board taken from the floor of his car unless she permitted his advances, the woman testified.

She was the first witness to take the stand this morning after attorneys spent an hour and a half selecting a jury.

She first appeared in a black dress and hat with a gold cross at her neck. She was asked to leave the courtroom after a consultation of prosecution and defense counsel, and when she reappeared, the cross was not in sight.

The young woman's testimony detailed the alleged attack in the vicinity of the Congressional Country Club on the night of October 1 following a party at the home of mutual friends in Washington.

Burns followed the woman to the stand after testimony had been taken from Dr. H. S. Douglas, 1673 Columbia road northwest, who examined her the morning after the alleged attack, and from Edwin R. Donaldson, an agent of the U. S. Bureau of Investigation, who examined her clothing.

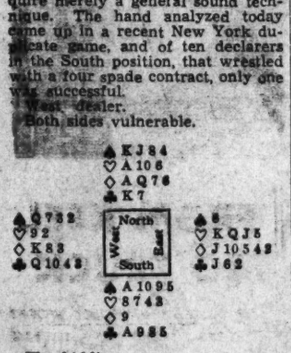

Burns admitted having relations with the woman, but declared they were permitted and that he had asked her to marry him.

MRS. ELY CULBERTSON ON CONTRACT

Sound Technique.

Hands that call for the execution of a certain type of coup—elimination—and throw-in play, grand coup, squeeze plays, etc.—are much less difficult to the experienced player than other hands that require merely a general sound technique. The hand analyzed today came up in a recent New York duplicate game, and of ten declarers in the South position, that wrestled with a four spade contract, only one was successful.

West dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
Pass	1 ◇	Pass	1 ♠
Pass	3 ♠	Pass	4 ♡
Pass	4 ♠	Pass	Pass
Pass

North and South were not using asking bids; therefore, South's four heart bid was merely a psychic, designed to prevent a heart lead. South felt morally certain that North would not pass to his four heart bid, since even if he liked hearts as well as spades he would be afraid that the four heart bid was some kind of cue bid.

At any rate the bidding worked out as South had hoped it would, and West was dissuaded from opening a heart, choosing instead the fourth-best club. Declarer won with the Ace, and led a diamond to dummy's Ace. He then ruffed a low diamond and used dummy's club King as an entry for the ruffing of dummy's other low diamond. The fall of the King on this trick established dummy's Queen, but made it necessary for declarer to take fresh precautions. He now laid down the spade Ace and followed it up with the ten-spot. When West played low, declarer could not afford to finesse, because if the ten lost to the doubleton Queen in East's hand, a diamond return would be ruffed by West.

The safety play, therefore, of putting up dummy's spade King was made, and now the bad news was out that West still had the Queen-7. But quite undismayed, declarer played dummy's Jack of spades. West won with the Queen and attempted to force dummy's last spade by leading clubs, but declarer declined to ruff, discarding dummy's two losing hearts.

When West was through with his two club tricks he could lead only a heart or spade, and in either case his last trump would be picked up by the dummy. Declarer was to be congratulated for having avoided many pitfalls, and for having thrown every possible safeguard around his contract.

Guest, Figure in World Polo, U. S. Citizen, Court Here Holds

The Society Leader's Rights Under 1923 Cable Act Upheld by Bailey.

Winston Guest, tall, broad-shouldered, internationally famous polo player and New York society figure, won his long fight with Uncle Sam yesterday when Justice Jennings Bailey, in United States District Court, ordered Immigration Commissioner Daniel W. MacCormack to issue him a certificate of citizenship.

Bailey's decision was based on the Cable act of 1923, amended in 1934, which set forth that a child born of alien parents without the United States shall be deemed a citizen of this country by virtue either of the naturalization of the mother or father, or resumption by either, of American citizenship.

Complied With Act.

Guest complied fully with requirements of this act, Bailey held. He was brought to this country by his mother in 1919, while still a minor.

The mother, an expatriate by virtue of her marriage to an Englishman in 1905, made application for and was issued a certificate of resumption of citizenship in 1923. Since then Guest has lived continuously in the United States.

"I think that under the law petitioner became a naturalized citizen upon the resumption of citizenship by his mother," Bailey said in summing up.

"Under the facts admitted by the demurrer it would be plain ministerial duty to issue the certificate."

Guest Not Present.

Guest was not present at yesterday's hearing.

He petitioned District Court last October to issue a declaratory judgment and a writ of mandamus either to show that he is natural-born citizen of this country by virtue of the fact that his mother never renounced her American citizenship, or, failing that, to compel immigration authorities to issue a certificate of naturalization.

He charged at the October hearing his Nassau County Democratic opponents made an issue of his citizenship for political capital in his race for State Senator as a Republican.

24-Ounce Baby Born In Abandoned School

Ravenswood, W. Va., Dec. 7 (AP).—A makeshift incubator kept a 24-ounce baby girl alive today, but physicians held little hope for her survival. The baby was born to Mrs. W. R. Allis in her home in an abandoned schoolhouse 5 miles out in the mountains.

Dr. J. H. Donovan fashioned the "incubator" from two old fur coats and a ragged blanket.

Victim of Gang 'Forgets' Under Mobsters' Eyes

loophole in the questions, even those concerned with immaterial details, to avoid a direct answer.

Calling each of the accused men by name, Goldstein asked O'Brien if he knew them. The witness, described by police as a "small-time bootlegger," admitted he knew each of the defendants, although, he hastened to add, not intimately.

Goldstein asked O'Brien if he recognized anyone in the courtroom as one of his assailants. Like a flash, O'Brien's eyes swept over the accused men and he hastily said:

"I seen the men that shot me, but I don't recognize any of these men."

Harried by questions from Goldstein, O'Brien gave the following description of the shooting:

One guy got out of a car and came up to me. He had a gun and he said, ah—I don't know what he said, and he acted like he wanted to fight, so I grabbed him. The other guy had a gun so I held the first feller in front of me and somehow or other, I don't remember how, I was knocked down or fell down and the shooting started."

Just before the shooting started, O'Brien reluctantly admitted, he was talking to W. R. ("Country") Carpenter and his sweetheart, Miss Viola Jenkins.

"Carpenter ran through the lunchroom before the shooting started," O'Brien, in a sudden burst of loquaciousness, admitted.

Miss Jenkins fled, too, and later told police she remembered nothing. She will not be called as a witness and she sat wide-eyed with excitement in the courtroom while O'Brien was on the stand.

Upon concluding the direct examination, Goldstein pleaded "surprise" and asked permission to cross-examine his own witness. Despite the protests of Defense Counsel Harry Whelan, Charles Ford, F. Joseph O'Donoghue and Myron Ehrlich, Justice Gordon granted this permission.

"Don't you recall telling Lieut. Cox that "Monty" Montgomery was at the wheel of the car with a gun in his hand when Tear and a tall fellow who looked like Bond attacked you on the sidewalk," asked Goldstein.

"I remember talking to Cox, but I don't recall saying anything like that."

"When police brought Montgomery to your hospital room, didn't you say 'That's Montgomery; I've known him a long time. He was the man in the car?" questioned Goldstein.

"I might have said he was Montgomery, but I didn't say he was the man in the car," O'Brien replied.

Every question important to the prosecution that Goldstein asked met the laconic reply, "I can't remember," or "I don't recall."

The defense made no effort to question O'Brien and he was excused under orders to reappear today at 10 o'clock.

O'Brien admitted he had been shot only after he turned to Justice Gordon and asked.

"Will that incriminate me?"

Informed it would not, O'Brien smiled and said:

"I was shot."

Detectives, fearful the case which they once believed was "iron clad" will collapse completely, are anxiously awaiting the testimony of Carpenter and Harry ("Spike") Behrle.

Behrle previously had told detectives he was dragged into a car two blocks from the scene of the shooting a few minutes after leaving O'Brien and at the point of a gun was forced to put his pal "on the spot."

Jury Picked in Hour.

A jury of 12 men was selected to try the six men on charges of assault with intent to kill and assault with a deadly weapon in less than an hour. Defense attorneys through use of peremptory challenges kept women off the jury.

Only four of the jurors said they had read about the gang outbreak in the newspapers and none of these had formed any opinions on the subject.

Goldstein kept off the jury all talesmen who lived either in Georgetown or Southeast.

The warring mob, police said, rules the numbers game and illicit liquor racket in Washington. Refusal of O'Brien and his henchmen to overlordship of his Southeast domain by the Georgetown mob led to the shooting, police said.

Montgomery, Bond and Tear already face jail sentences as co-conspirators in the giant liquor ring smashed by Federal agents last year. Montgomery, "brains" of the ring, was fined $10,000 and sentenced to serve from two to four years in the penitentiary. Bond received a similar jail sentence and a $5,000 fine. Tear was sentenced to from four months to two years. The men appealed on the grounds Government employes were members of the jury which convicted them, but the Supreme Court yesterday ruled such a complaint was not a basis for an appeal.

Bishop Warns Catholics 'Red' Revolt Is Near

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, Dec. 7.—A call for zealous effort by Catholics to prevent a situation where "Communists may seize the city and start a red terror" came today from Bishop Michael J. Gallagher, of the Catholic diocese of Detroit.

"We may not exactly be sitting on a volcano," Bishop Gallagher told the annual conference on Catholic Family Life at Marygrove College, "but we are in danger within three or four years."

The white-haired ecclesiastic, friend and supporter of the Rev. Charles E. Coughlin, made the opening address at the conference.

Catholics who have joined Communist organizations as observers, testimony of detectives before a United States Senate committee which investigated strike-breaking and other sources provided the informtaion on which he based his warning of revolution, Bishop Gallagher said.

"When the word is given for the revolution," he asserted, the first act of the Communists would be "to shoot priests and nuns on sight and burn the churches."

G. T. Thomaides Funeral Held

Funeral services for George T. Thomaides, local attorney, were held at St. Sophia Greek Orthodox Church yesterday. Burial was in Glenwood Cemetery.

Mr. Thomaides, who lived at 3900 Fourteenth street northwest, died Saturday at Emergency Hospital. He was 59.

Born in Smyrna, Turkey, son of a wealthy Greek merchant, Mr. Thomaides was educated at the American Anatolia College in Smyrna and came to this country as a young man. A master of seven modern languages, he entered the Postoffice Department inspector's office. At the same time he studied law at Georgetown University.

Mr. Thomaides was a member of the District Bar Association, a past president of the American-Hellenic Professional Society, and a past president of the board of trustees of St. Sophia Church.

Surviving him are his wife, Mrs. Evelyn S. Thomaides, a daughter, Eleanore Thomaides, and two sons, Thomas and Theodore Thomaides. He also leaves a brother, Basil Thomaides, New York City exporter, and two married sisters, both of whom live in Athens, Greece.

Bandits Get $250 In Grocery Holdup

Two armed colored bandits robbed a Sanitary Grocery Co. store at 2534 K street northwest during the rush hour yesterday morning and escaped with $250 shortly before the funds were to be taken to a bank.

James C. McKenney, of 1525 A street northeast, told police the men entered while he was stooping under a counter to get a carton of cigarettes. One of the men demanded the money from the cash register, McKenney said.

After getting the money the bandits forced the storekeeper into a rear room and ran from the store.

Meanwhile, detectives were searching last night for yeggmen who broke open a safe in the Lucky Strike bowling alleys, Fourteenth street and Riggs place northwest, and made off with $2,500 in bills.

New Maxwell Trial Tomorrow; Hard Task in Getting Jury Seen

State Prepared to Call as Many Panels as Necessary to Obtain Impartial Body; Defense Fund Contributions Continue.

By Edward T. Folliard.
A Staff Correspondent.

Wise, Va., Dec. 7.—With Edith Maxwell, erstwhile school teacher in this "Lonesome Pine" country, scheduled to go on trial a second time Wednesday for the "slipper murder" of her father, circuit officials tonight were prepared for a major round-up to corral a jury.

The problem is to find 12 men who are neither "for" nor "against" the 22-year-old girl, 12 who never have expressed an opinion in the celebrated case.

Somewhere in the mines, on the farms or elsewhere in these Cumberland Mountains, it is hoped that there are 12 such men, but everybody concerned believes they are going to be hard to find.

If the first venire is exhausted without a jury having been selected, Judge Ezra T. Carter will order the sheriff and his deputies to comb the countryside for another venire.

This will be repeated if necessary until 12 qualified men are found. Women, of course, are not eligible for jury service in Virginia.

Edith Maxwell, who has been living on a farm near Richmond since she was released on bond in September, is expected to arrive here tomorrow. With her will be her mother, Mrs. Anne Maxwell, and her 13-year-old sister, Mary Catherine.

The mother and sister were Edith's only witnesses at the first trial. They told how Trigg Maxwell, the blacksmith-father, yelled out in a drunken rage that he "ought to break" Edith's "neck" for staying out late. Between them they told how he threatened her with a butcher knife, pulled her around the room by her hair, and how Edith, feeling a slipper beneath her, picked it up and rapped him over the head with it.

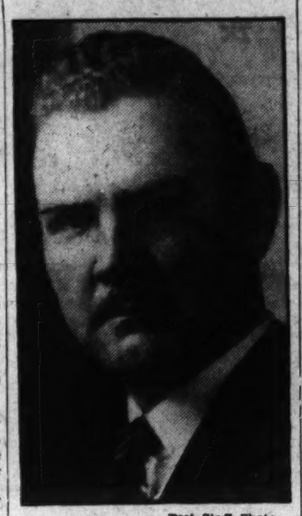

Trigg Maxwell went to bed after that, saying he wasn't hurt. Forty minutes later he got up, walked to the kitchen, collapsed and died. It was Edith who ran for a doctor.

All that happened the night of July 21, 1935, in the Maxwell cabin at Pound, Va., a cross-roads hamlet about 12 miles from here.

The following November, a jury of mountaineers in Wise found Edith guilty of murder in the first degree and sentenced her to 25 years in the State penitentiary.

Readers of The Washington Post thought this a weird kind of justice, and they so wrote the editor. Ultimately they began contributing to an Edith Maxwell defense fund of which The Post was custodian.

The Post engaged Charles Henry Smith, noted Alexandria lawyer, to take over the fight for Edith. He carried the case to the Virginia Supreme Court of Appeals, highest in the Old Dominion.

Post Staff Photo.

CHARLES HENRY SMITH.

That tribunal threw out the first degree murder verdict as unjustified by the evidence, and ordered a new trial. And then, after 14 months in jail, Edith was permitted her release on bond.

Meantime, readers of The Post began to contribute to a fresh fund to meet the expenses of the second trial. That fund now has almost reached the $600 mark.

Attorney Smith was to leave Alexandria late tonight and arrive in Abingdon, Va., at 10:30 a. m. tomorrow. From Abingdon he will make the 70-mile trip to Wise by automobile.

Edith will be prosecuted by Commonwealth's Attorney Fred B. Greear, young, partly bald official, who obtained the 25-year sentence against her last year.

Greear will be assisted by Oscar M. Vickers, one of the best criminal lawyers in the Cumberland Mountains. An attorney in private practice, Vickers is not being paid by the Commonwealth. He is being hired by Lee Skeen, Edith's uncle by marriage, who is determined to see her punished.

Inclosed find.....as a contribution to the Edith Maxwell Defense Fund to be used by The Washington Post in her retrial.

Crash That Took Life of Lieut. Christopher Is Being Investigated.

A Coast Guard board of inquiry is investigating the death of Lieut. Luke Christopher, killed Saturday when his amphibian plane plunged into Assateague Harbor.

The board also will inquire into circumstances surrounding the wreck of another plane, disabled in the same vicinity while attempting to remove a sick seaman from a freighter.

The board Commandant Russell R. Waesche said, left yesterday for the Eastern Shore region and later will go to Cape May, N. J. Members include Commander Robert Donohue, of the Coast Guard's general board; Lieut. W. J. Kossler, commander of the Charleston (S. C.) Coast Guard Air Station, and Lieut. C. B. Olsen, Coast Guard operations officer here.

Lieut. Christopher will be accorded a hero's funeral in Arlington National Cemetery tomorrow. Time of the services has not been set.

Formerly a Government test pilot, he was widely known here as a Coast Guard officer and aviation authority. Regarded by aviators as one of the country's best test pilots, Lieut. Christopher injured himself permanently while performing an important series of "terminal velocity" dive tests for the National Advisory Committee on Aeronautics, and transferred to the Coast Guard.

Ex-WPA Worker Kills Self With Gas

Frank Himelright, 53, of 624 H street northwest, a former WPA worker, killed himself yesterday in his two-room flat when his wife was going to the store.

Mrs. Himelright told police her husband had not worked for several years and had been on relief. Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald issued a certificate of suicide. Himelright was the father of seven children.

Vestrymen of the church said they valued the exchange at approximately $61,000.

The Wythe house, built in 1755, served as headquarters for the British Cornwallis and later was headquarters for Gen. Washington's staff during the Yorktown campaign.

Cabinet Holds Bitter Session In Australia

By the Associated Press.

London, Dec. 7.—King Edward's empire tonight welcomed the relaxation of tension in the crisis resulting from the monarch's desire to marry Mrs. Wallis Warfield Simpson.

Although dispatches indicated public opinion in the dominions may be swinging into line behind King Edward, many newspapers continued to stress the theme that his marriage to Mrs. Simpson was impossible unless he should choose to give up his crown.

Australia's federal cabinet bitterly discussed yesterday's appeal of William M. Hughes, former prime minister and member of J. A. Lyons' cabinet, that King Edward "make a supreme sacrifice for the sake of the empire" by giving up Mrs. Simpson.

Resignation Urged.

At one time, it was understood in reliable circles, there was a threat to demand Hughes' resignation, but amicable relations were restored eventually.

After a lengthy session of the New eZaland cabinet, Prime Minister M. J. Savage said "the latest indications suggest the situation is less difficult."

The New ealand cabinet was called to meet again tomorrow.

Savage said a general election in Great Britain over the crisis was "unthinkable."

"Such a position would be farcial," he said, adding: "Let us hope the throne will never become a shuttle-cock in a political fight."

South African newspapers editorially urged the importance of a decision soon, asserting that the present position in Great Britain and the empire was "bearing heavily" upon the Dominions' business.

Irish Remain Aloof.

The Irish Free State remained aloof, but the Irish public eagerly followed the situation across the Irish Channel. English newspapers bearing pictures of Mrs. Simpson—not printed in Ireland—were in brisk demand.

A dispatch from across the Atlantic carried the following comment from the Montreal Star:

"The King, being comparatively inexperienced in the serious functions pertaining to his office and being swayed by a dangerous romance, seems handicapped in forming a sound judgment. The so-called 'king's men' are fully aware of their opportunity, and as mischief-makers will offer the King a support based on personal ambition.

"In the meantime, the opinion of the dominions may be asked. Our opinion is that they would decide by an overwhelming majority that the sovereign should accept the advice of the ministers who have been selected for his guidance and not that of the ambitious schemers who have been trying to control his decision."

5 Bodyguards Insure Privacy For Mrs. Merryman in London

"I Never Interview Anybody," Flustered "Aunt Bessie" of Mrs. Simpson Tells Newspaperman Who Runs Scotland Yard Gauntlet.

By the United Press.

London, Dec. 7.—Mrs. Buchanan Merryman, of Washington, D. C., who chaperoned the romance that rocked an empire, ate a lonely dinner at 16 Cumberland terrace tonight with five bodyguards around her.

The gray-haired little American woman, Mrs. Wallis Simpson's "Aunt Bessie," appeared bewildered by the clamor that rang around her as 495,000,000 subjects of the British Empire joined in the crisis of King Edward's determination to marry her niece.

She refused to venture from the graystone house, from which Mrs. Simpson fled to France three days ago. Five Scotland Yard officers kept intruders from the place.

Aunt Bessie is terrified by newspaper reporters.

It was two years ago that Mrs. Merryman, whose blue-blooded Virginia ancestry gave her a secure social position in Washintgon and Baltimore, assumed a quiet role in the royal romance.

She is Mrs. Simpson's only immediate relative and she went to England to chaperone the then-married niece through the gayety of Mayfair's "Prince of Wales set."

The prince gave her a gunmetal bag. She still treasures it.

Life among the British aristocracy and royalty moved at a faster pace than the afternoon teas and bridge parties over which Mrs. Merryman presided at her modest apartment at 1911 R street in Washington. But she made the perfect, self-effacing chaperone.

A United Press correspondent went to see Aunt Bessie at Cumberland Terrace today. Fifty yards from the house he ran into the "advance outpost" of the bodyguards, a Scotland Yard man.

The correspondent finally was allowed to proceed to the house. The door was opened by a butler. The correspondent produced a card and was bowed into a hallway. The butler disappeared, bearing the card.

Mrs. Merryman appeared, wearing a black silk dress with a collar of pearls, and studied her visitor curiously.

"Just who are you?" she asked.

"I am an American newspaperman, and I——" the reporter began.

Aunt Bessie's dignity vanished in a flash. Her face reddened, she tugged nervously at her dress.

"Oh, so you are a newspaperman," she said. "Well, I can't speak to you. I never interview anybody."

She bowed. The interview was at an end.

Mrs. Simpson Offers to Stand Aside, Allow Edward Freedom

King's legal adviser, and Sir Walter Peacock, receiver general of the Duchy of Cornwall, conferred with the prime minister for more than an hour.

Monckton returned to Fort Belvedere at midnight, presumably to report to the King on the conference.

The Duke of York, who would be next in line for Edward's throne should the monarch step down, dined at Belvedere, leaving at 1 a. m.

Has Pleaded With King.

Despite anything Mrs. Simpson might do or say, Edward's intimates insisted the struggling sovereign never would allow their future happiness to be frustrated by the code of Britain's kings.

In their darkest hours, friends said, Mrs. Simpson repeatedly had beseeched the monarch to give her up to save his throne.

Prideful of his deep and sincere affection, the monarch spurned all such tearful entreaties, they said, even coming as they did from the lips of the person he held closest to his heart.

Edward, they said, would follow the dictates of his heart, no matter what the world, his government or Mrs. Simpson should urge him to do.

Edward, friends of both he and Mrs. Simpson said, consented to permit her to flee to the Cannes villa of Mr. and Mrs. Herman Rogers only after making clear his determination not to give up either his throne or his love Attitude Unchanged.

This is what the woman who has upset the whole empire told the world today in a statement which she signed but worded in the third person:

"Throughout the last few weeks she has invariably wished to avoid any action or proposal which might hurt or damage His Majesty or the throne.

"Today her attitude is unchanged and she is willing if such action will solve the problem to withdraw forthwith from a situation that has become unhappy and untenable."

She issued her statement, the more dramatic through its simplicity, after telephoning Edward several times during the day.

It was handed out to representatives of the world press by Lord Brownlow, who declined to comment.

Mrs. Simpson's statement was given to the world after a momentous day in the moving drama of love and an empire.

In the thick silence of the House of Commons, Prime Minister Baldwin informed the anxious members the King "informed me of his intention to marry Mrs. Simpson whenever she should be free."

His reference was to the time when Mrs. Simpson's decree nisi from Ernest A. Simpson comes up for final hearing next April 27.

First Mention of Name.

His utterance was the first in which the name of Mrs. Simpson was mentioned in the House of Commons.

Speaking briefly but pointedly, Baldwin told his listeners that:

The only advice profered His Majesty by his ministers was on the question of a morgantic union which Baldwin last Friday told Commons his government would not make possible by legislation.

The government desires "to afford His Majesty the fullest opportunity of weighing the decision which involves so directly His Majesty's own future happiness and the interests of all his subjects."

But, he added quickly:

"At the same time they cannot but be aware that any considerable prolongation of the present state of suspense and uncertainity would involve the risk of gravest injury to the national and imperial interests—and indeed no one is more insistent upon this aspect of the situation than His Majesty."

Turning to the question of reaction from His Majesty's dominions to any course of action on which Edward finally should decide, the prime minister said:

"It will then be for those governments to decide what advice, if any, they would feel it their duty to tender him in the light of his conclusion."

Still Resolves to Wed.

From the lips of the highest spokesman in the realm save the King himself then came the assurance that Edward VIII still steadfastly refused to surrender the dictates of his heart for what his ministers told him should be the responsibilities of empire.

The dilemma, however, appeared no nearer definite solution because under the present laws anyone the King married would automatically become England's Queen and the the strongest influences in the kingdom have opposed any "Queen Wallis."

Baldwin spiked the possibility of a morganatic union last Friday when he told Commons "His Majesty's government are not prepared to introduce such legislation."

There was, of course, the possibility that Baldwin and his cabinet might resign and Edward might find another prime minister wno could assemble ministers willing to introduce such legislation.

This, however, appeared even more doubtful of success as far as Edward was concerned because of the overpowering Baldwin support manifested in Commons today.

Winston Churchill, outspoken champion of Edward in the situation, arose and attempted to ask the prime minister for a full statement "not only upon the personal, but also on the constitutional issues involved."

An uproar drowned his words, with a preponderance of the members joining in efforts to shout him down.

Afterward, observers felt that the demonstration against Churchill had not been caused so much by his allegiance to the King in the present situation as by the Common's resentment over Churchill's repeated anti-Baldwin stands.

Edward's Duty That of Realm, Mencken Says

Hope to Lead Private Life Declared Beyond Right as Ruler.

For the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Dec. 7.—The natural sympathy which all us poor fools have for one, another should not be allowed to obscure the fact that, in the comedy now sinking so miserably into farce, his Britannic Majesty has acted very badly. The conflict in that comedy has not been between a romantic hero on the one hand and a cruel ogre on the other, but one between a silly middle-aged boy and a pedagogue trying to recall him to his duty. The strength of the King's case, such as it is, lies in the circumstance that everyone loves a lover, even and perhaps especially when his love affair is ridiculous. Its weakness lies in the fact that the respect of the world is reserved for him who plays the game according to the rules.

Crown Bound to Custom.

Has Edward done so? It must be manifest that he has not. There is between him and his lieges a definite contract, no less explicit because it is mainly only implied. They agree on their side to yield him certain valuable deferences, honors, prerogatives and powers, the widest and most glorious that any man on earth enjoys today. And he agrees on his party to conduct himself according to certain precise patterns, many of them out of harmony with the normal inclinations of man.

Some of the articles that bind him are well known. He has no vote, and may not whoop for this or that candidate at election time. He may not accept an engagement in the moving pictures. He may not open a cocktail lounge in Piccadilly, or even a haberdashery shop or insurance office in the Strand. He may not become a Roman Catholic, or a Mosiem, or a Christian Scientist, though many millions of his subjects subscribe to those faiths. He may not be converted publicly to Communism, or Fascism, or Naziism, or any other political theology not official in his country.

He may not go about his public duties in slacks or overalls, but must dress up for etvery occasion in the garb deemed suitable for it. The army and navy of the empire, in the eyes of its law, are under his personal command and indeed his property, but he may not disband either of them without the consent of Parliament, or send them upon enterprises that Parliament disapproves.

King Far From Free Man.

The list of such obligations is very long, and some of them are undoubtedly onerous. But he took them on when he took the oath as King, and he can no more evade them without dishonor than he could evade his obligation to be decently dutiful to his mother. Not the least of them in his duty to contract no marriage that violates the mores of his realm, as those mores are interpreted by the constituted authorities, spiritual and secular.

You and I are free, as private men, to marry any women who are optimistic enough to have us, but the King of England has no such liberty. For he is not and never can be a private man, however hard he may try to think so; he is the ruler and symbol of a great empire and the stammhalter of a dynasty.

It must be plain that the marriage he proposes is not suitable to that status. I am quite willing and indeed eager, as a fellow Baltimorean, to admit that the lady of his choice is a model of grace and virtue. She would make him a conscientious wife, and what is more, she would add greatly to the joys of human existence at his court. But the fact remains that the King of England simply cannot have a couple of morganatic brothers-in-law hanging about the back door of the palace. He may not marry a woman whose previous adventures in connubial bliss have gone beyond the point held to be seemly by his people. He may not flout a prejudice that is as deep, if perhaps as irrational, as the sturdy English prejudices against steam heat, thin underwear and edible cooking.

Cheers of Mob Misleading.

The cheers of the London mob need not detain us. It is made up in part of malicious persons, eager only to afflict the government, and in part by mere idiots. Its opinion is not the sober and considered opinion of the British people. For good or for evil, the true Britons are opposed irrevocably to the innocent, artless polygamies of Hollywood and Long Island. And despite their natural human sympathy for a man fighting desperately for his girl, they are also irrevocably in favor of playing every game according to its rules.

In that field Edward has failed them, and hence shocked them. They have been giving their allegiance to a man who seemed to be, and was assumed to be, the gaudy incarnation of all the ancient decorums they so furiously venerate. They find themselves confronted by a jazz baby—willful, petulant, irresponsible and preposterous. It is almost as if he had been caught robbing a hen-roost or joining the circus.

The people of the United States would have been quite as shocked if their President had revealed himself in the same character, and proposed to launch into the same folly. Nay, even the people of Mongolia would have been shocked.

Will His Majesty throw off the cabinet and marry the lady? I do not undertake to answer, for I retired formally from prophecy on the black Wednesday following the first Monday of last November. But whether he fights his way to the altar or falls by the way it must be obvious that he has brought himself to ruin, and that he'll be lucky if he doesn't involve in that ruin all the other members of his family.

ONE century ago a Scotchman had his own idea how a Scotch whisky should taste. And now thousands upon thousands of Americans agree with him . . . on Teacher's delightful flavour.

Irish, Elated, Weigh Dispute Over King as Secession Chance

by Eamonn de Valera, together with but separate from the new constitution, the official quoted an excerpt of a speech made by the Irish chief executive last November at the eleventh annual Ard-Fheis, or convention of the Fianno Fail (government) Party.

Long Awiated Chance.

Outlining the new constitution at that time, which he said will deal only with internal questions, Eamonn de Valera then said:

"One matter I can mention again at this stage: What is the question of our external relations? As I say, I intend separating, as much as I can, these two matters. The matter of external relations ought to be a matter not for consideration but for a law that would be implementing any agreement on these relations.

"And the question of our relations with Great Britain and with the states of the British Commonwealth must be a matter on which the Irish people will separately pronounce. • • •

"There will be, simultaneously with the introduction of the constitution, a bill that will make it possible to continue present relations until such time as the Irish people will clearly make up their mind that they do not want these relations to continue."

"That time may be the present," the official concluded, adding with a broad Irish grin: "A free Ireland will give the banshees an earned rest."

Bandits Abandon Car And Sleeping Infant

Los Angeles, Dec. 7 (AP).—Twenty-three-month-old Michael Perumean was found unharmed—and still sound asleep—today on the back seat of his parents' sedan which was stolen last night from in front of a residence. Thieves abandoned the car when a tire blew out.

The policemen came across the machine, parked at a curb in Anaheim, gingerly lifted out the dozing infant and notified its frantic parents, Pete and Celilia Perumean, who had feared for its life.

Misinguette Engaged.

New York, Dec. 7 (AP).—Mlle. Mistinguette, French dancer, arrived on the liner Normandie today and said she was going to marry a Chicago business man who had been a fellow passenger, within the next three weeks. She refused to tell who he was. She said she might stay in the United States three years.

The Creation Of Jobs.

Since the inception of the PWA, Secretary Ickes has been handicapped in pushing his public works program by lack of knowledge regarding the volume of indirect employment resulting from governmental construction activities. Now the Bureau of Labor Statistics has completed a two-year study which arrives at the conclusion that the PWA has created two and one-half jobs, in the industries making and assembling building materials, for every one directly provided in actual construction activities.

This study should prove exceedingly valuable as a guide to future planning in the field of public works. The results indicate that as an agency to provide employment the PWA compares very favorably with the WPA, despite the much heavier outlays under the former for each man directly employed. If Secretary Ickes had been able earlier to demonstrate the value of his enterprise as an indirect stimulus to private industry, he might have had better success in his campaign against the much cruder principles on which Mr. Hopkins' program operates.

The current study, however, does not affect the fact that the Administration cannot possibly solve the unemployment problem by its work-creation program, whether that concentrates on construction of useful public works or on boondoggling activities.

Under normal conditions, when there is no question of emergency relief to be considered, public works can and should be carefully timed as a "prosperity reserve" to take up the slack in employment. For the purposes of such long-range planning, the kind of information which has been assembled by the experts of the Bureau of Labor Statistics is invaluable. But during the acute stage of a depression, public works construction has proved everywhere to be a very inadequate re-employment device. The PWA is no exception to that general rule.

Less than a year ago Secretary Ickes was complaining that "instead of siphoning enough money into the channels of trade through the construction of substantial public works to do a recovery job, we have been using an eye-dropper." In view of the billions of public funds that have gone through that despised eye-dropper for both PWA and WPA projects, one is forced to conclude that the Administration's attempts to solve the unemployment problem did not fail for lack of liberal spending.

They failed simply because they were based upon the fallacious theory that Government spending can ever be extensive enough to provide the stimulus necessary to make private industry capable of absorbing all the unemployed.

Now Is The Time.

In addition to starlings and cutaways, Washington probably has more typewriters per capita than any other city in the country. Therefore, an address delivered at the annual meeting of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers recently should be of particular interest here. Revision of the standard typewriter keyboard was proposed.

Study of thousands of sheets of typewritten material at the University of Washington has revealed that the greatest number of typographical errors occurs in words where the majority of letters are found off the "home," or middle row of the keyboard. With this row as a base of operations, fingers trained in the "touch" system reach out to any key without need of direction from the eye. Even the best fingers, however, are not infallible. The more they stray from the second row, the greater the number of errors.

Consequently, the University of Washington researchers propose rearranging the keyboard to place the most common letters in the middle row. A count of letters in ordinary typewritten matter shows 52 per cent of them on the top row of the standard keyboard, 32 per cent on the middle and only 16 per cent on the bottom. On the revised keyboard, the letters which constitute 70 per cent of the words used in normal correspondence would be placed in the middle row. With this rearrangement new pupils have been taught to type in less than half the time usually required; their accuracy also improved.

The thought of changing anything so universally standardized as the present keyboard is staggering. But the early history of this machine suggests that such an attitude is one of unreasoning conservatism. When first invented, the typewriter won wholesale applause for its ingenuity, but was dismissed as a mere curiosity, the criticism being that the average person could not learn to operate one.

Since then, typewriting has proved so easy that courses in the "touch" system are today offered by most high schools. And if an even simpler system has now been discovered, there is no reason why it should not some day entirely replace the "qwertyuiop" keyboard.

What Sort Of Neutrality?

The draft convention on neutrality which the United States delegation has just submitted to the Buenos Aires conference is the natural and, indeed, the inevitable corollary to the plea previously voiced by Secretary Hull for the ratification of the five existing peace pacts of American origin.

These pacts represent the considered thought of New World nations as to how peace can best be safeguarded in this hemisphere, if not in the world as a whole. The proposal now advanced by Secretary Hull is that, above and beyond these treaties, there be created a permanent consultative body to collaborate in ways and means of preventing conflicts in the Americas. In the event that war should nevertheless break out in this hemisphere, the convention would further bind Pan-American states in a common system of neutrality.

With neither of these broad purposes can there be any quarrel. Events have abundantly proved that peace can not be permanently assured by pacts alone. It is essential to delegate to some body, such as the Permanent Inter-American Consultative Committee now suggested, the task of keeping continuously abreast of developments which affect the operation or sanctity of those treaties.

The willingness displayed by nations in accepting restrictions on their freedom of action itself implies a readiness to confer together in the event of actual or potential disturbances. Obviously, the less haphazard and the more regularized these consultations, the better the prospects of treaty observance. Similarly, unity of action by the American states for the preservation of peace obviously calls for unity of action in the event of an outbreak of war.

That the draft convention is not designed to supplant existing peace agencies, such as the League of Nations, or to run counter to obligations already entered into by American states, is clearly brought out in Article XI, which reads:

> Nothing contained in this convention shall be deemed to interfere with obligations incumbent upon any of the high contracting parties by virtue of other multilateral treaties or conventions to which they are parties at the time of the entering into effect of this treaty.

Those American nations which are members of the League of Nations will, therefore, continue to be bound by its Covenant. Therefore, they will be in a different position to non-League members in the application of a general neutrality policy, since their Covenant obligations envisage sanctions against a treaty-breaking state.

Actually, however, these nations can point out that the acceptance by all the American states of such agreements as the Kellogg Pact and the Saavedra Lamas treaty would make it difficult for New World nations to be neutral in the event of a war arising in the Americas. It is doutful, for instance, that the United States can legally refuse to draw any distinction whatever between an aggressor nation and its victim.

Although it embodies no sanctions, the Kellogg Pact pledges its signatories not to employ war as an instrument of national policy and therefore implicitly condemns any nation that wages an aggressive war. The Saavedra Lamas treaty goes further. It imposes the sanction of nonrecognition of territorial gains made by force. It can easily be argued, therefore, that the convention proposed by Mr. Hull can not consistently lead, as some in this country believe it will, to a broader application of the neutrality law now on our statute books.

The point needs clarification. As the proponent of the proposed convention, it is up to the United States to show whether it is at all possible to harmonize mandatory neutrality action, involving an embargo on credits, arms and ammunition to all belligerents without distinction, with the clear moral obligation to oppose aggression implied in the Kellogg Pact and the Saavedra Lamas treaty.

Certainly it would be an astonishing development for the nations of this hemisphere to establish with one hand a regional agreement resting on the five treaties while, with the other, giving advance notice to potential aggressors that in the event these treaties are flouted the aggressor and his victim will be treated exactly alike.

Valuable Jurors.

There will be general satisfaction with the opinion of the Supreme Court upholding the law which permits Government employes to serve as jurors. Without this decision, the machinery of justice, in the District of Columbia in particular, might well have suffered serious damage. As it is now, a very large body of Washingtonians, described by Chief Justice Hughes as "highly desirable in point of intelligence and character," is kept available for future panel calls.

There seems little substance to the objection that employes of the Government might be subject to some form of prejudice in cases where Government interests are involved. In most instances no issue of this sort would arise. Where it does, the right of challenge still remains in jury selections. Exclusion of thousands of citizens from an important civic function would have been a slur on their integrity. Further, it would have been an indirect reflection on national ability to develop a civil service system competent to select and protect Government employes on the basis of their merit alone.

Cheap Money.

The details of the Government's mid-month financing operations are chiefly remarkable because of the extremely low cost of borrowing. A long-term bond issue callable in 12 years carries a record low interest rate of 2½ per cent. Similarly, the new five-year Treasury notes carry the lowest rate of any publicly offered notes of similar maturity.

Doubtless these facts will be cited as evidence that the credit standing of the Government is growing stronger day by day. Those who look below surface appearances, however, will find another explanation of present low yields on Government issues. They will point to the easy-money policies pursued by the Federal authorities, and to the existence of a huge volume of idle funds piled up in the banks by deficit financing and augmented by a capital inflow stimulated in part by dollar devaluation.

While the public debt has been expanding by leaps and bounds, the supply of high grade securities available for investment has remained extremely limited. The banks, confronted by a restricted demand for commercial loans, with abundant resources at their disposal, inevitably turn to Government issues as a form of investment. The result of this combination of factors is an abnormally low level of interest rates on Government securities and also abnormally low yields and abnormally high prices for high-grade bonds in general.

In view of the artificial character of the present situation, Dr. Lionel D. Edie recently warned members of the Investment Bankers' Association to be prepared for a change in the trend of money rates. He pointed out that if interest rates were to go halfway back to the level of the twenties, a large number of banks would have their capital and surplus wiped out and the bankers would also be blamed for losses suffered by individual investors who had purchased bonds at high prices.

Dr. Edie rejects the thesis that interest rates can be controlled at all times in accordance with deliberate policy. He fears a spontaneous rise that would suddenly and disastrously deflate the one market which in his opinion can now be regarded as inflated—that is, the market for high-grade bonds. With the prospect that the Government will make substantial additions to the Federal debt before the end of the present fiscal year, Dr. Edie's remarks deserve serious consideration.

Steam-Heated Skiing.

Only snow is needed to send a group of Washington skiers off to the mountains for the first run of the winter, according to a notice in the Sunday paper. The item was tucked away among the society news: skiing does not yet rate the attention of sports writers in these parts. In New York, to the contrary, sports pages are now filled with announcements concerning the first international ski meet which opens there on Wednesday.

As soon as the six-day bike riders have ended their "race to nowhere," an 85-foot trestle is to be installed in Madison Square Garden, 500 tons of ice will be fed through ice-grinding machines and in a trice the great arena will be transformed into a miniature Garmisch Partenkirchen. Experts from all the snow hills of the world will be on hand, led by Otto Lang, whose unpretty but effective Arlberg crouch is the most popular ski technique today.

Of more interest to the crowds, however, will be the jumpers who expect to make leaps of 60 feet or more on the indoor slide. Watching them, some New Yorkers will probable learn for the first time that a ski-jumper does not soar motionless through the air, but instead must flap his arms violently in order to maintain balance. But every spectator will get his money's worth, for ski-jumping with its great speed and height is a sport to stir even the most sophisticated.

What should be particularly intriguing about the meet is the behavior of the program boys of the Garden. Accustomed as they are to the lingo of many sports and pageants, from prize fights and bike races to automobile shows and political rallies—what will be their cry at their first ski meet? Will it be the usual "H'yah, folks, getcha programs," followed by "read all about your favorite gelaendesprunger?"

Presidential Terms.

From the Springfield Republican.

The advocacy at Boston by former Controller McCarl, before the New England conference, of a single term for our Presidents, presumably of six or seven years, brings forward again an idea which is as old as the republic and on both sides of which interesting arguments can always be made. If such a change, making the President ineligible for re-election, should ever be adopted, it would be more difficult to classify the Presidents as to their success in office. In broad terms, a successful President is one who is re-elected and an unsuccessful President is one who is not re-elected. That is an even simpler classification than the one which, according to William H. Taft, was adopted by Theodore Roosevelt. "Theodore puts all the Presidents into two classes, the Lincoln class and the Buchanan class," said Taft, "but the trouble is that he always puts himself in the Lincoln class and me in the Buchanan class."

Washington Transportation.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: For the past two years whenever people began to criticize the transportation system in this city, I have always tried to defend it on the grounds that it had a huge problem with a fast growing population and that the merging of the two systems would make it much better. However, I have been forced to come to the conclusion that the transit company is more dividend conscious than service conscious.

Winter is here and the public is to be made to suffer for inefficiency. It is bad enough to have to wait for 20 to 30 minutes in good weather for a bus (and with two empty buses trailing behind!); but to have to wait in cold, rain, sleet and snow is detrimental to the general health of the community. To make the public unreasonably wait in the cold and then have them cough and sneeze out germs in a suffocatingly packed bus is anything but a public service.

According to the press reports, the transit system is not paying and will have to increase its fares. If the transportation monopoly is justified in demanding more money for its "services," the public is more than justified in demanding a decent amount of service.

If the system cannot give proper service and make money, let it get out and allow the Government to at least give to the voteless citizens of this community from one to two hours a day of dependable and more pleasurable transportation.

He Asks No Odds.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your able editorial on "A Regimented King" aroused my suspicion that you do not believe in Santa Claus, or even the stork.

The royal institution enlists for the constitution "the credulous obedience of enormbus masses." It is "a visible symbol of unity to those still so imperfectly educated as to need a symbol." Thus you quote from Bagehot.

Is The Post converted to the wisdom of exposing the works to our own imperfectly educated electorate?

You think the King will never have his way in the present contest and save his crown.

The lords of Great Britain (including economic royalty) are now hedging on the divinity which hedges their King. Dave Windsor, as a visible symbol, has attained to such high visibility that I'll wager a considerable trifle with The Post that Dave wins the masses against the "hardheaded men who run the British Empire."

Now for another Gilbert. "Nonsense, yes—but O! such exquisite nonsense!"

A District Teacher's View

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As a substitute teacher who has served very pleasantly under Charles Hart, the patient, sympathetic, efficient principal of the E. H. S., may I express my approval of the stand he takes on the question of the use in his school of magazines that carry articles on communism, even though these articles contain criticism of the much dreaded "red peril."

There are many problems that the high-school teacher must help to solve for parents and children as well as for herself and her school. A history instructor in Western High School was dishonorably discharged for a week, without pay, soon after the armistice because she remarked in her classroom that there were some good features in bolshevism. Children of poor understanding, and there are many such children who have come up with excellent marks from the grades, reported to their parents that their teacher was a Bolshevist. She was restored to her position through the efforts of the Teachers Union.

This illustration seems to work both ways, I admit, but so long as there are fathers and mothers who have read about Russia (or who perhaps have not read about Russia) just so long shall we need to guard against the evil influences of anarchistic writers. Even in the columns of responsible commentators such as Dorothy Thompson can clip quotations and so weave them together as to prove to gullible readers that fascism and the New Deal are one and the same. The devil, you are aware, can quote Scripture to his own advantage.

The teachers, of course, resent any restriction of their rights of free speech. At times, however, a history instructor must feel relieved to know that the pupil who asks whether she believes in Karl Marx need not receive an answer. We can not discuss in high school classrooms the debatable questions of history, for history is still in the making. What communism believes today it may reject tomorrow. Current events cast their shadow before, but who dares follow the shadow when war looms on the horizon?

I have read the article on fascism in the denounced "American Observer." In simple language it describes the improved conditions in Italy; in still simple fashion it remarks that fascism is not good for a democracy like the United States. It explains that dictators bring on foreign wars to keep peace at home. Thus in 1924 Roman citizens boasted that Mussolini had given them clean streets, pure water, trains that run on schedule. They did not mention the fact told me by an American vulcanologist on Mount Vesuvius that groups of Italian anti-Fascists were meeting secretly throughout the country, determined to bring on a revolution in spite of the black-shirted bodyguards. How can children be given correct views of situations that baffle their elders?

As a teacher of long experience I feel sure that text-books should be the product of mature reflection. In our college courses we tried out the Atlantic Monthly because modern educators demand present day literature. In few classes were the essays, varied though they were in style and in material, satisfactory models for young writers. One longed for a Stevenson, an Arnold, a Huxley, when one needed to bring home a nice point in rhetoric. In my high-school work I have not discovered that Scholastic is so effective a guide as are well-chosen essays from Mark Twain, Hamlin Garland, or Hawthorne. A published book carries far greater weight than an essay, which may soon be tossed into the wastebasket.

I therefore maintain that the School Board is wise in banning from its classrooms even the most carefully censored current newspapers. They may with the best intentions, pervert the truth; they are not crystallized in formation that can be regarded as proved; they are safe only for minds that have been taught to weigh carefully what they read in the papers. Let our children skim over these papers in their own homes but let us keep as sacred as the infallibility of the Pope the knowledge that we give out in our school rooms.

A 13-Month Year.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In your excellent paper, under date of December 4, appeared a short article, republished from the Atlanta Constitution, entitled, "New Calendar Urged." The aforesaid article may be good propaganda in favor of a 13-month "blank day" calendar, but it employed poor logic when it stated that "the United States is supporting the proposal to call an international convention to consider the reform." Since when has "the Central Statistical Board—a Federal Government agency," grown so important that it can set aside the verdict of the United States Congress? In 1929, the Congress of the United States gave a negative report on the 13-month "blank day" calendar and refused to issue a call for an international convention to consider such a reform.

"The proposed "blank day" 13-month calendar is so radical, if put into operation, that it would alter the days of the week each year and twice during leap years, making Sunday fall each year on a different day of the week. All religious days, birthdays and holidays would be changed to different dates of the month than the original dates, thus destroying the significance of an anniversary event and the sacredness of a holy day sanctified by God and religion.

Aside from the above radical changes, it would be a most expensive calendar, requiring each tenant to pay an extra month's rent each year, an extra telephone bill, an extra monthly premium on life insurance and a hundred and one other monthly extra dues. For most people, 12 monthly payments come too quickly; why lay this extra burden up them? Bookkeeping would be complicated instead of simplified with a 13-month year, having "blank" days which are not reckoned in the weekly cycle. And then, horror of all horrors, think of a 13-month year and Friday invariably falling upon the thirteenth day of each month!

Amen For Cleveland.

To the Editor of The Post: Sir—In your clarifying editorial, "The President's Powers," of November 16, you state:

There seems to be a widespread assumption that the election has given the President authority to re-establish abandoned New Deal agencies in spite of the Constitution or Supreme Court decisions. Regardless of the majority a President may receive, he is invested with only those powers enumerated in the organic law. Nothing the electorate may do, short of amending the Constitution, can increase those powers. For the President to increase them on his own initiative might easily prove an inexcusable breach of trust.

With an inauguration approaching, it is politically timely to recall the solemn commitment of Grover Cleveland at his first inaugural in 1885. Cleveland proclaimed:

In the discharge of my official duty I shall endeavor to be guided by a just and unstrained construction of the Constitution, and a careful observance of the distinction between the powers granted to the Federal Government and those reserved to the States or to the people, and by a cautious appreciation of those functions which by the Constitution and the laws have been especially assigned to the executive branch of the Government.

Amen, say I.

G. O. P. Reorganizers.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Representative Hamilton Fish is out with a statement to the effect that the Republican party needs reorganizing, and leaves the implication that he would be willing to undertake the job.

If my memory is correct Representative Fish backed one of the entries in the 1936 Presidential primaries, but his entry didn't even "show!" His subsequent silence during the campaign, however, may be taken as evidence of his sportsmanship and loyalty to the party.

George IV's Affair.

"THE affair of which the eyes of the whole world are turned at the present moment brings to mind another royal romance, the hero of it being Edward VIII's great-great-granduncle, George IV.

Mrs. Fitzherbert was a beautiful and wealthy widow when she first attracted the attention of the then prince as she sat in a box at the opera in radiant loveliness. It was a case of love at first sight and he was soon, characteristically, pursuing her. Like Mrs. Simpson, she had been twice married, but although only 24, had twice been widowed.

The lovely widow is said to have responded coldly to the prince's attentions, knowing his reputation as a philanderer and what such attentions from a man in his exalted position usually lead to. The most absurd stories are told of his efforts to excite her interest; how he bled himself frequently to make him look pale and lovelorn; how he actually stabbed himself to the extent of drawing blood in order to win her sympathy. In the last instance he sent his surgeon and three gentlemen of the court to bring Mrs. Fitzherbert to his bedside where she was told he was lying dangerously wounded. Being a discreet lady, Mrs. Fitzherbert, although much alarmed by the reports, refused to go to Carlton House, the prince's residence, unless she was accompanied by a lady of high rank and the Duchess of Devonshire went with her.

She found the prince covered with blood and was overcome when he told her he would not go on living unless she promised to become his wife. Overwrought by the condition in which she saw the prince she consented to allow him to put a ring on her finger. But later, she protested that she had not been a free agent and left England for Holland where she spent several months at the court of William and Mary of Orange.

In the meantime constant correspondence was carried on between her and the prince, and although she spent a year in "fighting off," to use her own words, his demands for a union which she knew held little prospect of peace and happiness for herself, she was induced at last to return to England and to agree to marry him on such conditions as would satisfy her own conscience.

Immediately after her return she was married privately to the prince according to the rites of the Roman Catholic Church but by a Protestant clergyman.

The letter of the officiating clergyman and another document with the signature and seal of the prince, in which he repeatedly referred to her as his wife, have been preserved.

History repeats itself and the prime minister, Charles James Fox, did everything in his power to prevent the prince taking this serious step. In a letter to the prince dated December 10, 1785, he wrote: "I was told just before I left town yesterday that Mrs. Fitzherbert had arrived; and if I had only heard this I should have felt the most unfeigned joy at an event which I knew would contribute so much to your royal highness's satisfaction; but I was told at the same time that, from a variety of circumstances which had been observed and put together, there was reason to suppose that you were going to take the very desperate step, (pardon the expression) of marrying her at this moment."

Intrigues were soon set on foot to break off the Prince's connection, not because she was a commoner, for there had been many commoners who had reached the throne, but because she was a Catholic.

Efforts followed to dispose of Mrs. Fitzherbert, at first pleasantly, then with thrusts. On the supposed authority of the King, she was offered £20,000 a year if she would retire to the continent and break off all connection with the prince. This she refused, saying she needed no addition to her fortune, which had been plentiful before she knew the prince, and that she would not sell her happiness. Then she was offered the bait of the title of duchess, but she replied to that that she knew she would never be received at the Court of St. James even though she were a duchess, and that on the continent she would not be acceptable at court because she would be looked on as the Prince's discarded mistress.

There was just one condition on which she would accept any offer made to her and that was unacceptable to the government. It was that her marriage with the prince be acknowledged but that it may be set aside on the ground of illegality. Plans were on foot for the marriage of the prince to the Princess Caroline of Brunswick, and the government had no idea of admitting there had ever been any other marriage.

Things were brought to a crisis through a jealous quarrel between the prince and Mrs. Fitzherbert (he was beginning to see other charmers, anyhow), and by his enormous debts. The government had the whip-hand over him there for they would not agree to pay his debts until he agreed to do as they demanded. So he became obedient and married Caroline for whom he expressed extreme distaste on their wedding day, caused, some say, by his bad conscience in regard to Mrs. Fitzherbert.

Best Gossip.

ON THE DAY that the body of King George V was brought from Sandringham to London last winter, the gun carriage jiggled crossing some car tracks and the diamond cross surmounting the crown which rested on the coffin came loose and fell into the road. A young artillery officer marching by the coffin picked it up and put it in his pocket and it was screwed back in place that night. Very few observed the incident or noticed the absence of the cross from the crown, but those few mentioned it and the news spread, nevertheless.

The British do not believe in signs or attach special meaning to the conduct of graveyard rabbits, and the fall of the cross from the crown was regarded as a natural happening without deeper significance although many of them doubtless felt a little sense of shock.

Now, within a year, the new King has threatened to remove it definitely, in the spiritual sense, and, behind the legal point which is known as the constitutional question, that is the issue between him and the government.

• • • •

MR. BALDWIN does not say there would be any legal objection to his marrying Mrs. Simpson and is troubled only by the fact that the marriage, being so dreadfully legal, would make Mrs. Simpson Queen and place the children, if any, in direct line of succession. The prime minister's statement said nothing about Mrs. Simpson having been divorced twice, but that is the real objection, and it comes from the Church of England, which is the official church of the nation, with powers and influence comparable to those of the Crown itself.

Although the church was originally constituted to accommodate a king's desire for a divorce, and for other reasons, it is now very austere on the subject, and the conduct of the royal family from Victoria down to Edward VIII has confirmed the idea that divorce is disgraceful if not necessarily immoral. The prime minister's claim that the proposed marriage is a state matter and therefore subject to the disapproval of the government is simply a defense of the official church, which pays for its keep in service to the nation, especially in time of war.

However, Mr. Baldwin probably has in mind the thought that a woman divorced twice in 20 years might be just naturally restless. The idea of a Queen of England packing off to Reno and then into the movies and selling her memoirs doubtless disturbs him, too.

Just one look at Mr. Baldwin, with his iron hat, his umbrella, his high-water pants and his glum, square, Rock-of-Gibraltar face, leave little hope that he will be moved by any talk of that wonderful thing called love. English statesmen are long-headed and unromantic, except, of course, where it is good ballyhoo to exploit the boy-and-girl scenario, as in the orthodox royal matches, which sometimes need a little official crooning.

• • • •

THERE IS NOTHING in the record to prove that Mrs. Simpson would run out on the King and the British Empire, but she just barely might, and the reliability of the Queen is no less important to the nation than to the King himself. It would be taking an unnecessary chance, and, as prime minister, it is Mr. Baldwin's duty to prevent needless risks. So why speak of love to Stanley Baldwin?

The English church deserves consideration because it sanctions all the British wars, selling that to the people as holy causes, sometimes in jobs where this takes very superior salesmanship. The church thus has had an important part in the building of the empire. In St. Paul's Cathedral today there are many monuments to soldiers and sailors of the empire who conquered colonies far away, and the inscriptions frankly say they are enshrined because they fought for the empire and, of course, for God. Some of them fought for God side by side with the Turks, and it is a serious thing to descredit an institution which could sell that bill of goods to a Christian nation, although the soldiers in those days were mostly illiterates without a very high sales resistance.

Well, it has been the best gossip in modern times, and it has shown what hypocrites we all are when we say we don't like to dish the dirt. For the world has loved it, all but the unfortunate Germans and Italians, who couldn't have any and don't know what they are missing. Won't they be surprised when they come out of the ether and begin to catch up on all that has been going on in the world while they were under it?

Teacher's Oath Law

Massachusetts Expected To Follow Ohio In Repealing Law After 61 Supporting Legislators Fail Re-election In Bids.

By Joel Underwood.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

Boston.

ONE RESULT of the recent election in Massachusetts is the increased likelihood of the repeal of the teachers' oath law, which has been on the statute books since 1935. An unsuccessful attempt at repeal was made last March by interested groups and persons, but the attempt was defeated in the House by a wide margin. Since that time, however, there has been a turnover of 96 seats in the House. Partial returns from a questionnaire sent to the new legislators by the Massachusetts Society for Freedom in Teaching indicates that more than two-thirds of them are for repeal.

According to an analysis prepared by Prof. James Sheldon, of Boston University, out of the 96 legislators who were not returned, 61 were supporters of the oath law. This would leave 35 holdovers in the House who have supported the legislation. If as many of the new legislators as one-third are favorable to the oath, the total pro-oath strength in the House will be 67 votes, scarcely enough to block repeal of the legislation, since there are 224 votes in the House.

The teachers' oath law has had an interesting history. According to Prof. Samuel Eliot Morison, of Harvard, one of the first test oaths to be enacted by the Massachusetts Bay Colony was vetoed in 1699 by the first Irish Governor of Massachusetts, Lord Bellomont. The present oath, although only recently a matter of public interest, has been an annual proposal for the last seven or eight years by the Daughters of the American Revolution.

Teachers Declared Not Public Officers.

AT THE TIME of its adoption in April, 1935, it was being sponsored by patriotic organizations and one Boston newspaper as a purgative for Communists. The authority of the General Court to require such a test was based on the assumption that teachers are public officers. The best legal opinion does not countenance this view, however. A public officer in Massachusetts is one who exercises some portion of the sovereign power. Cases in the Supreme Judicial Court of the Commonwealth and the opinions of the attorney general appear to be unanimous in the view that a teacher, whether of a public or a private school, is an employe and not a public officer.

The act was so framed as to prevent an easy test of its constitutionality in the courts. The penalties which could be visited for violation of the oath were entrusted largely to school committees and boards, for such violation was made just cause for the expulsion of even those teachers who had served for three years, and were, therefore on tenure. In the case of many of the school committees of the State, this was a potentially vexatious weapon, for the administration of the school system by elected committee members is often a thing of politics.

The total haul as a result of these tactics must have been disappointing to the proponents of the oath, for only three professors, out of the whole teaching profession, objected to the oath to the point of actual resistance. Two of these men were at Tufts and one at Harvard. Of these three, two were geologists and the third, an economist. One flatly refused to swear and resigned his post. Another sought to modify the language of the oath to the extent of stating that compliance was being made under protest. The third was determined neither to take the oath nor to give up his post, but the intercession of his president persuaded him to comply.

Law Applied Before It Became Effective.

THE LEGISLATION did not become effective until October 1, 1935, but certain schools and one college were so zealous in complying with the law that they administered the oath to their faculties on September 28. Whether this was legal and proper was a question requiring an opinion of the attorney general. His opinion made it necessary for such institutions as had beaten the gun to go through the procedure a second time. Apart from the three professors, there were no refusals to comply. The strategy of the proponnts of repeal was to fight the issue in the Legislature and not in the classroom.

The next session of the General Court gave them this opportunity. Appearing in personal opposition to the oath law were the presidents of Harvard, Boston University, Tufts, Smith and Wheaton. Present also were representatives of Wellesley, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Simmons, Radcliffe, Williams, Amherst and Mount Holyoke. Besides the nondenominational colleges, appearances were made by Bishop Emeritus William Lawrence, of the Episcopal Diocese of Massachusetts, and representatives of the bench, bar, labor unions and civic and charitable associations. William Green, of the American Federation of Labor, addressed his opposition through Robert J. Watt, secretary-treasurer of the Massachusetts Federation.

The hearings on the repeal bill were reminiscent of the best days of the French revolutionary tribunal. Leading scholars and educators were impertinently examined upon their suspected Communist beliefs by maiden legislators making reputations for themselves as tribunes of the people. Their attitude was like that of the juror who wanted to know what the prisoner was doing in the dock if he wasn't guilty.

The vote against repeal was not even close, the bill going down by 133 to 88. The opposition between town and gown was strongly emphasized in the unanimous pro-oath vote by the entire delegation of Irish Democrats from Cambridge.

Dorgan Of Dorchester Was Sponsor Of Bill.

THE ACTUAL SPONSOR of the oath law was Representative Thomas Dorgan, of Dorchester. Mr. Dorgan in September elected to resign his seat in the House to seek a higher reward. He chose instead to run for clerk of the Superior Civil Court of Suffolk County. One of the peculiarities of Boston politics is that the Democrat who wins this nomination in Suffolk County is automatically elected. Republicans do not even run for it.

The State branch of the American Federation of Teachers and the Massachusetts Society for Freedom in Teaching made a concentrated effort to defeat Dorgan. The strategy was to get him to talk about the oath law to the exclusion of all else. This was accomplished by goading him through statements in the conservative Republican papers, a press which has little circulation in Suffolk County. Mr. Dorgan had enough vanity to devote his entire campaign to answering these statements, which his constituents never read. It sounded very much to them as though Mr. Dorgan were bragging to no purpose.

Toward the close of his campaign, Dorgan was devoting his time to a world view of the office for which he was contesting. More and more, Spain, Russia, and the menace of Red revolution preoccupied him to the confusion of an electorate which was wondering what he was going to do for them as clerk of the Superior Civil Court. The error of this policy was painfully brought home to the father of the oath law for, while he was fighting the crusade, Mr. Joseph Finnegan was being nominated.

The proponents of repeal can look forward, then, to a Dorganless Legislature. Of the six members of the committee on education who opposed repeal in March, four will not return in January. Three went down in the primaries or the election, and one withdrew. Among the defeated, partly at least as a result of the efforts of the Federation of Teachers and the Society for Freedom in Teaching, is Mr. Frederick T. McDermott, of Medford. McDermott is a very young man who got himself some publicity last March by wagging his finger at President Conant, of Harvard, while probing for Communist heresies.

In the letter columns of the local newspapers, there has been some discussion lately between Dorgan and some of his old adversaries as to whether the oath played a very important part in the defeat of those supporters who lost seats. In the case of seven or eight of these legislators, including Dorgan, it is clear that their positions on the oath law did contribute to their defeats. Generally speaking however, the oath law issue had little bearing on the results. Curley spoke for it and was defeated by Lodge who had voted for it consistently.

Ohio has repealed its oath and New York is expected to fall in line. The chances are good that Massachusetts, too, will abolish an act of legislation which should never have been adopted.

Pastor Resigns.

British Crisis

By Barnet Nover

King Seven Times Over.

NOT THE LEAST complicating factor in Great Britain's present constitutional crisis is that the monarch is not a unitary but a multiple figure.

He is to begin with, of course, a human being—Edward Albert Christian George Andrew David Patrick of the House of Windsor endowed as is the very lowliest in his realm with "organs, dimensions, senses, affections, passions." But it is his present misfortune that on his head there rests a crown—a multiple crown—and it is by the very nature of things of far greater importance than he is. For kings come and kings go—the crown remains.

It is the King as a person who has aroused those ardent sympathizers which have found such dramatic expression in the booing mobs in Downing street and the cheering mobs before Buckingham Palace. Those supporting Edward see him simply as a lovesick swain who is being kept from his heart's desire by aged and unfeeling ogres led by Stanley Baldwin. And they are right, in part.

It is undeniable that social as well as constitutional factors, snobbery as well as the understandable determination of Parliament to retain its historic primacy over the King in the British political system, are playing a part in the struggle between King and cabinet.

It would be much simplier for the average man in Great Britain and outside to understand the real importance of this struggle if no purely personal issues were involved. Yet the fact is that the personal desires of the monarch are inextricably interwoven with constitutional questions of very great magnitude.

• • • •

FOR THE KING is only of minor importance as a person; it is his major function to serve as a symbol and as a symbol he is not one person but many. There was a time, centuries ago, when the English King was in fact as well as name the actual soverign. Such phrases as the "king's men" the "king's highway," the "king's law" then had a literal significance. Louis XIV could say: "The State? I am the State!" and in so doing utter a truism that applied not only to the France of his time but to every other land where the king's power was absolute.

This has never been wholly true in Great Britain since the days of Runnymede and it is not in the least true in our own day. The King's prerogatives have in the course of the centuries steadily been whittled away until the only real influence he now has lies in the fact, as Wilhelm Dibelius pointed out, that "he is the one Englishman who has access at any time to the prime minister." But while the King's direct authority has in fact diminished to insignificance, his theoretical authority remains absolute.

Under British law the King can do no wrong; cannot, as Blackstone said long ago, "even think a wrong." But the reference here is not to the person on the throne, but to the crown as the symbol of sovereignty which is, by definition, unlimited and infallible. In this respect the crown plays the same role in the British system that the Constitution does in ours.

• • • •

AS A SYMBOL the British crown has been of enormous usefulness to the British nation and at no time more than during these last decades when the outlying self-government areas have tended more and more to go their own way.

For when the dominions became, as they did after the war, practically independent nations, the crown remained the one permanent link uniting them to each other and to the mother country. This was an actual fact even before 1931, when the Statute of Westminster came into force. That statute gave the sanction of law to an existing reality.

It defined the status of the dominions in the British commonwealth as "autonomous communities within the British Empire, equal in status, in no way subordinate to one another in any aspect of their domestic or foreign affairs, though united by a common allegiance to the crown, and freely associated as members of the British Commonwealth of Nations . . . Every self-governing member of the empire is master of its destiny. In fact, if not always in form, it is subject to no more compulsion whatever."

• • • •

IMPERIAL PUNDITS have long racked their brains over the meaning and the implications of this statement. To some of them the concept of a multiple king is much too tenuous to survive the storms of the modern world.

In the medieval world, they have pointed out, men feverishly debated how many angels can sit on the point of a needle. Now the question is how many crowns can rest on the head of one king? For if, they argued, the dominions "in fact, if not always in form" are in a position to pursue an individual course in their foreign as well as in their domestic affairs, it follows that while the King of England might be at war, the King of Canada might by action of the Ottawa Parliament and government be neutral and, conceivably, the King of South Africa or the King of the Irish Free State could be supporting the enemy.

The conecpt strains crdulity. But without it unity within the British Empire would not even be a concept. Hence the regular policy of the British government in consulting with the dominions before embarking on any major foreign policy. Indeed, it can be said the British commonwealth of nations today rests on three pillars—community of sentiment, a common crown and common membership in the League of Nations.

It is hardly surprising, then, that throughout the present constitutional crisis Prime Minister Baldwin should have made special efforts to sound out the dominion governments. And, no doubt, their opposition to the King's marriage has played no small part in his determination to block the development even if such attitude should cause the monarch's abdication. For in the minds of British statesmen there is no necessity surpassing that of maintaining intact the unity of the empire.

Edward VIII, King of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, is also King of Canada, of Australia, of South Africa, of New Zealand, of Newfoundland, and, if somewhat tenuously, of the Irish Free State. Thus he is seven separate kings in one. If we omit the King of the Irish Free State, whose government is quite unconcerned by the present constitutional struggle going on at London, six of these monarchs are lined up on one side; the flesh and blood Edward on the other.

The unity which Mr. Baldwin is so interested in is, to this Edward, just a millstone around his neck.

The Opium Eater

By William Lyon Phelps

Thomas De Quincey.

Today, December 8, is the anniversary of the great English writer, Thomas De Quincey, who died December 8, 1859, at the age of 74.

He began eating opium when he was an undergraduate at Oxford, though surely he did not need that to put him to sleep during the lectures.

He was over-intellectualized when a child; he had no normal, healthy childhood or boyhood. At the age of 13 he wrote Greek fluently and composed original poems in that language at 15. But he could do more than that. While still a boy, he conversed easily in Greek. His teachers at school said of him "that boy" could deliver an oration to an Athenian mob better than any of the teachers could do to an English one.

He published his "Confessions of an Opium Eater" as early as 1821, putting the thing in book form the next year. It attracted immediate and widespread attention.

The wonder is that De Quincey lived to be an old man. He broke all the laws of health and had a genius for irregular habits, in everything connected with food, sleep and hours of work. Despite his delicate health as a child, he must have had a tremendously powerful constitution.

He was always the perfect gentleman. It has been said of him that he was an ideal illustration of James Russell Lowell's description: "the grace of perfect breeding, everywhere persuasive and nowhere emphatic."

Venezuela Strides to Progress With End of Long Dictatorship

Democracy Is Taking Hold Under Gen. Contreras; People Happy.

De Witt Mackenzie, Associated Press foreign staff writer, visited Venezuela some months ago and as the first anniversary of the death of Dictator Juan Vincente Gomez nears, he outlines steps which have been taken to re-establish this important oil producing country as a democracy.—Editor.

By the Associated Press.

Approach of the first anniversary of the death of Venezuela's tyrannical dictator, aged Gen. Juan Vincente Gomez, finds that rich country making marked progress toward democracy in one of the great political turnovers of history.

Freedom came December 18, 1935, after more than a generation of fierce dictatorships, some 27 years of that period under the iron fist of Gomez. A year ago the lowly people were living in a state of near serfdom, without many personal rights. Most had never heard of such thing as a popular vote.

Opposition to the government was crushed by terrorism. Those who ran afoul of their masters were imprisoned and fettered, or exiled, or put to actual torture. There was no freedom of spech, and the press was muzzled by an air-tight censorship.

Rulers Became Wealthy.

Gomez and his adherents had waxed immensely rich, and the poor had become poorer. It is true the ruler had wiped out the public debt, eliminated direct taxation, built some fine highways and made other improvements. There are those who sing his praise, but his successors charge that these things represented a division of only part of the river of gold that flowed into private hands of privilege.

With the last breath of Gomez the embittered people started to pillage and burn property belonging to the old man and his followers. The blood of citizens wet the pavements of the Plaza Bolivar in Caracas when a Gomez official ordered the military to fire into a vast crowd of demonstrators.

Then was born a new nation under the dominant leadership of President Lopez Contreras, an outstanding personality and head of the crack armed forces of Venezuela. He had been the right hand of Gomez, but he had the reputation of shielding the people as best he could, and the man in the street liked him for that. The public followed his leadership, and in the past year there have been many changes.

Popular Vote Nears.

A democratic constitution, providing for popular vote, has been prepared, and in the near future there will be a general election—the first that many of the people have ever seen. Gomez' hand-picked legislature will give way to men elected by the country.

The government is in the process of reclaiming, through the courts, hundreds of thousands of acres of the country's richest farming and grazing lands which were in the possession of Gomez, unlawfully, according to the prosecution. Other huge estates of Gomez-fattened overlords are being similarly treated.

These ranches will be broken up—some have been already—and turned over to the impoverished, would-be farmer who, under the dictatorship, was unable to get hold of land. Money is being loaned to the small farmers to help them get started.

Other court suits are being brought to recover money and securities held by Gomez and adherents. Nobody knows how much the general was worth, but it was plenty. Some estimates have placed his fortune at $100,000,000; some run higher, but they are guesses.

LOPEZ CONTRERAS.

Schools have been opened in rural sections where heretofore children lacked facilities to learn even reading and writing.

Communications have been improved. Highways have been driven into the hinterland, where lie the gold and diamond mines, which hitherto has been all but cut off from civilization.

Labor laws are being put into effect to improve the conditions of the masses.

The harbor of La Guaira, principal port of the country, and the railway from there to Caracas, have been taken over from British interests and placed under national control.

Venezuela and the United States are working on a trade agreement for mutual benefit. Under Gomez, and since his time, the Venezuelan duties on most imported goods have been terrific, to the detriment of American trade. Presumably concessions will be made by both sides.

The above are only part of the changes in less than 12 months. Coincident with them, though perhaps not directly related, this bids fair to be a peak year for oil production in Venezuela, which ranks among the foremost petroleum centers of the world. Word from Caracas predicts a record of more than 160,000,000 barrels. Last year some 150,000,000 barrels were pumped out of the wells—also a record output.

Contreras Behind Program.

The man behind all this great program, Gen. Lopez Contreras, is about 55 years old—a professional soldier with the face of an ascetic college professor. He is slim, straight and square-shouldered, and has an aristocratic, intellectual visage.

Let nobody be fooled by his scholastic appearance, however. He is as hard as a top sergeant when he has to be. The old soldier crops out in his short, incisive utterances.

"I am wholeheartedly for democracy," he told me in Caracas not long ago, "and my entire effort will be toward that end."

On top of that, with reference to radical elements in the country, came this:

"If democracy exceeds the bounds of law and order I shall meet force with force. I shall maintain my position. I depend upon the army and I know the army."

President Contreras has an exceptionally difficult problem to solve, in that the people have not been educated in democracy. He must educate them, and there is danger that, in their eagerness to get ahead, they will try to rush things too fast. But of this he told the writer:

"I will not be stampeded."

Machine to Solve Algebra Problems Is Reported Built

Cambridge, Mass., Dec 7 (U.P.).—Development of a mathematical machine capable of solving intricate algebraic problems was announced yesterday of Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

The machine, said to be capable of solving nine simultaneous linear algebraic equations involving nine unknowns, was built and designed by Dr. John B. Wilbur, of the school's civil engineering department.

Institute officials said the "simultaneous" calculator, designed for simple solution of complex mathematical engineering problems such as those arising in the building of skyscrapers and bridges, probably would save days of calculation in the ordinary manner.

The machine weighs one ton and has more than 13,000 separate parts.

The plant was shut down three weeks by a strike settled early last week. Duer said employes of the spinning and weaving departments returned to their jobs today. Other employes had already returned to get th eplant ready for the spinners and weavers, the two largest groups of employes.

Pope 'Better,' Expects to Quit Bed Tomorrow

Pontiff's Condition Shows Improvement; Plus Impatient to Work.

By the Associated Press.

Vatican City, Dec. 7.—The ailing Pope Pius was somewhat improved tonight and postponed some of the duties of his church until tomorrow, "when I am up again," despite the urging of physicians that he remain in bed.

Suffering a light form of paralysis of the legs, which first became apparent Saturday; high blood pressure, hardening of the arteries, asthma and uric acid poisoning, the pontiff was irked by his confinement and eager to return to his regular daily routine.

He signed numerous papers during the morning; conferred with Eugenio Cardinal Pacelli, papal secretary of state, and visited with members of his family. But other work was left over until tomorrow when he predicted he would again be up and about, Vatican prelates said.

An oral bulletin tonight setting forth that the holy father was further improved showed a continued gain in strength since he became ill Saturday.

But his physicians emphasized, however, that the pontiff was in need of continued rest, that he must avoid every unnecessary exertion—and that he should remain abed.

The Pope still has not permitted doctors to make a thorough physical examination, Vatican circles said, and for this reason the exact cause of the paralytic affliction has not been determined. A blood clot at the left knee, however, was said to be a strong contributing cause.

Army Awards Four Its Flying Cross

Four Army fliers yesterday were awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross for "extraordinary achievements," it was announced at the War Department.

The honors went to Maj. Barney M. Giles, Lieut. James H. Patrick, jr., Staff Sergt. Donald E. Hamilton and Corpl. Frank B. Connor, all stationed at Langley Field, Va. Their citation read:

"For extraordinary achievements while participating in an aerial flight from Concord, N. H., to East Brewster, Mass., and return on the night of February 9, 1935. Having been notified that seven CCC enrollees were stranded on an ice floe in Cape Cod Bay, Maj. Giles, accompanied by Lieut. Patrick, Staff Sergt. Hamilton and Corpl. Connor took off in an airplane during the hours of darkness, under dangerous flying conditions due to weather, and successfully located the men, dropped a message and reported their location, thereby chiefly responsible for saving their lives."

Holding Company Dividends Limited

By the Associated Press.

Exercising broad powers under the public utility holding company act, the Securities Commission yesterday prohibited registered holding companies from paying dividends unless approved by the commission.

The order was issued under that section of the act which gives the commission power to prevent dividend payments in order "to protect the financial integrity of companies in holding company systems, to safeguard the working capital of public utility companies, to prevent the payment of dividends out of capital or unearned surplus."

In another ruling the commission permitted the continuation of managerial and service relations without the necessity of obtaining the commission's approval.

N. Y.-Capital Flier Marks Birthday

The fifty-first anniversary of the Congressional Limited, crack Pennsylvania Railroad flier between New York and Washington, was celebrated yesterday.

It required the first Congressional Limited 5 hours and 25 minutes to puff its way from Washington to New York, but yesterday the train, pulled by electrically powered locomotives, sped over the route in 3 hours and 35 minutes.

Since its inauguration the Congressional Limited has covered 8,500,000 miles, the equivalent of 325 trips around the earth or 35 one-way trips to the moon, railroad statisticians announced.

Government Urged To Curb Market

New York, Dec. 7 (AP).—Noel Sargent, secretary of the National Association of Manufacturers, today urged the Government and taxpayers "to prevent artificial speculation in securities."

Sargent addressed the opening session of the two-day annual meeting of the National Industrial Council, which will be followed by the annual convention of the National Association of Manufacturers.

He said he agreed with Secretary of Commerce Daniel C. Roper that vigorous action is needed to prevent "a runaway stock market so that unhealthy economic expansion may be prevented."

One of the laws he suggested ought to be amended was the tax on undistributed earnings, which he said would "tend to stimulate speculative use of such funds, and create new corporation financial difficulties when earnings decline."

Boston, Dec. 6 (AP).—One of New England's oldest firms, Bird & Company, roofing and floor-covering manufacturers, began today answering Federal Trade Commission charges it violated the new Robinson-Patman price control law by selling below established prices to Montgomery Ward Co., huge mail order house.

Suspect Held In 'Boots,Spurs' Thefts to Wed

Youthful Prisoner at 6th Precinct Shows Cupid Laughs at Locks.

Proof that Cupid laughs at locksmiths, probably will be given today or tomorrow when Jack Joseph Kurz, 21, "Boots and Spurs" gang suspect under indictment for robbery and held at the Sixth Precinct, marries Miss Hilda Crampton, 18, of Edmonston, Md.

To avoid having the ceremony performed in a cell, arrangements have been made for it in St. Dominic's Catholic Church, with the Rev. Joseph F. Beever presiding, Edward Buckley, attorney for Kurz, said yesterday.

Although on Saturday night both Kurz and Miss Crampton agreed to the wedding in the presence of Buckley and Father Beever, the ceremony has been postponed thus far awaiting a dispensation from Archbishop Michael J. Curley, of Baltimore, since Kurz is a Catholic and Miss Crampton a Protestant.

Early yesterday afternon when the girl's mother, Mrs. Charles Crampton, was interviewed at her home in Edmonston, she said she knew nothing of plans for a wedding. The daughter was not at her home. According to her mother, she left home Sunday night for Cottage City, where she is employed.

Kurz, who lived at 716 Independence avenue southwest and who passed his twenty-first birthday in his cell last Thursday, was arrested about ten days ago in North Carolina. Paul Burger, 19, also indicted for robbery and accused of a number of other holdups, was arrested at the same time. William Beck, 21, the third member of the gang, was later taken into custody here.

Couple Sentenced In White Slave Case

Justice James M. Proctor, in District court, yesterday sentenced Mary Sherman, alias Mary Hipple, to a term of from 4 to 10 months following her conviction on charges of violating the white slave act.

In addition, Justice Proctor sentenced James Sherman, her husband, to a term of from 3 to 5 months, and placed Joseph Marback, a third defendant, on probation, the latter having already been held in jail for six months because of his failure to post bond.

5 Wives Held in Gin-Induced Christmas Shoplifting Spree

Elizabeth City County Matrons Blame Petty Richmond Thefts on Liquor; Store Detective Spots Quintet After Bottle Was Consumed.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Dec. 7.—Five young married women from Elizabeth City County, arrested for shoplifting in a department store here today, tearfully told detectives they came to Richmond to do some legitimate Christmas shopping and the trouble must have started with the gin they drank in a rest room.

The five women, four of them mothers, told detective sergeants E. H. Parker and J. M. Wright they motored to Richmond this morning, found a State liquor store and bought two pints of an inexpensive brand of gin.

They set forth and in one store, they said, the five disposed of one of the pints. They had gathered a sizeable collection of toys, games, doll sets, etc., when a woman detective operative, employed in a large store, spotted them. She called police.

The fifth woman, who was carrying the gin, said she hadn't "come here for anything." She was held as an accessory.

The five were booked at a precinct station pending their efforts to raise bonds of $300 for their appearance in police court tomorrow.

They gave their names as Mrs. Marion Williams, 30; Mrs. Viana Goodson, 26; Mrs. Della B. Johnson, 28; Mrs. Rosalind Hudgins, 20, and Mrs. Mayme Hopkins, 20.

Napoleon Letters To Empress Marie Go On Sale Today

London, Dec. 7 (AP).—With art sales booming in London, collectors are expected to flock to Sotheby's tomorrow when hundreds of letters by Napoleon Bonaparte and his second wife the Empress Marie Louise, go under the autioneer's hammer.

Two years ago the emperor's passionate love letters to his consort, written during the ill-fated Russian campaign, were bought by the French government here for $75,000. The letters which go on sale tomorrow show the Corsican as soldier rather than lover.

The collection contains military dispatches and letters written in Napoleon's own hand when he was First Consul of the Republic, and referring in detail to the Egyptian campaign (1798-1801).

Later letters describe his battles in Syria, Russia and Spain, as well as Waterloo and the hundred days' campaign after the escape from Elba.

Besides Napoleon's letters there are 205 lots bearing the autograph of Empress Marie Louise.

Convict Who Fled Lorton 15 Yrs. Ago Gives Himself Up

Saying he had escaped from Lorton Reformatory 15 years ago, Frank Allen, 39, a millright, surrendered yesterday to United States District Attorney Robert J. Clendenin, in Peoria, Ill., the Associated Press reported.

"It was impossible for me to lead a good, Christian life with this sin forever in my mind," the attorney quoted the prisoner as saying.

After his escape, Allen said he joined the Nazarene Church, in South Bend, Ind. He was held last night in Peoria County Jail as authorities reviewed his story.

At the reformatory authorities said Allen was admitted to the institution in October, 1921. He was assigned to a "trusty" squad, and walked away from the prison while at work on construction of some new buildings early in December of the same year.

"Gag Man" Sues Cantor For $250,000 in Fees

New York, Dec. 7 (AP).—Comedian Eddie Cantor, defending a $250,000 suit brought by his erstwhile "gag man," David Freedman, was all seriousness today as he heard Freedman tell the court the Cantor radio income, on Freedman scripts, had risen from $2,000 to $14,000 weekly.

Freedman claims Cantor broke an agreement to pay him 10 per cent of his radio income. The comedian's attorney answered that Cantor was a famous stage personality before he ever met the writer and, furthermore, that Freedman voluntarily quit Cantor's employ.

2d Suit Is Filed Against 'Angel' In Temple Tiff

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles, Dec. 7.—A scenic artist, Ernest Thomas Eade, plunged into the Angelus Temple tempest today with a charge that Rheba Crawford, one-time "angel of Broadway," slanderously accused him of making love to Aimee Semple McPherson.

Eade, Temple employe, filed suit asking $100,000 damages from Miss Crawford, associate pastor of the temple.

This latest action in a bewildering maze of litigation which has seen charge and counter-charge tossed between the principals, was predicated on the following remark attributed to Miss Crawford:

"He (Eade) has been making love to Sister Aimee and I have the goods on him."

Miss Crawford said this, Eade charged, to Willedd Andrews, attorney for Mrs. McPherson. Andrews filed the slander suit today.

In a demurrer to Miss Crawford's $1,080,000 slander suit against her, Sister Aimee contended the charges concerning the remarks attributed to her were vague as to time and place.

Eade's accusation was specific to the minute. Miss Crawford made the statement, he declared, on November 8, at 11:45 a. m.

The statement, Eade complained, was false and malicious, defamed, disgraced and ridiculed him and made him the object of hatre, contempt an ridicule.

Ask Your Husband to Help You
END A COLD Quicker

Of course, you can really do most of this yourself. But he'll gladly help you end the misery of your cold.

Massage VapoRub briskly on the throat, chest and back (between and below the shoulder blades). Then spread it thick over the chest and cover with warmed cloth.

Already, your VapoRub has begun to bring relief—two ways at once:

1. Through the Skin. VapoRub acts direct through the skin like a poultice or plaster.

2. Medicated Vapors. At the same time, its medicated vapors, released by body heat, are breathed in for hours—about 18 times a minute—direct to the irritated air-passages of the nose, throat and chest.

Lost and Found

By Priscilla Wayne

SYNOPSIS.

Caught high in the Jemez Mountains by a blizzard, Doris Lee leaves her stalled auto and, when near death from freezing after she had sprained her ankle, she is rescued by Patrick, a big German shepherd dog, and his master. The master is young and handsome, and he bandages her foot expertly. Doris is interested in him in spite of his surliness and his refusal to talk about himself. When she, imitating Teck, an Indian servant, calls him "Doctor," he sternly forbids her to do so and instructs her to call him George. The blizzard has been severe and Doris must remain in George's luxurious cabin until the highway is opened by snow plows. Doris does not know that, after he has put her to bed in his room the night of her rescue, George heard a radio broadcast warning all police officers to watch for a girl who had taken part in a bank robbery and murder.

CHAPTER FOUR.

Teck served the breakfast on the card table just as his master had served the supper the night before. Teck brought a clean linen cloth and shining silver and gave all evidence of being thoroughly accustomed to the work he performed.

He was especially apologetic about the fireplace. "I was afraid you might wake up if I tried to fix the fire, Doctor. So I waited."

George laughed with all good nature. "I'd have wrung your neck if you'd wakened me."

"Yes, sir, that's what I thought," Teck grinned, seemingly not very much worried over the gravity of the threat.

Doris wondered how it happened that Teck could address George by the title Doctor when that young man seemingly resented having anyone else take the liberty.

With the familiarity of a servant long accustomed to a household, Teck questioned the doctor, "Why didn't you call me? I would have opened another bed."

George evaded the question, looking at Doris questioningly. "I didn't want to disturb you. Besides, I was very comfortable here on the couch."

Teck went back into the kitchen on one of his many trips and Doris took advantage of the opportunity to talk. "I'm sorry that I disturbed you. I could have slept here very well myself. I needn't have robbed you of your own room."

"I wanted to sleep here," George said pointedly. "There was a reason. I listened to the radio." He watched Doris closely.

The girl's face was expressionless. "I noticed your radio. I suppose you get very fine programs up here. How about turning it on now? There's a program on about this hour that I always enjoy."

Wants to Talk.

"Wait. Let us have our breakfast. I want to talk to you."

"Oh." Doris felt a touch of dismay. One minute he was the handsome host, making her feel graciously at home, the very next that mask of indifference that amounted almost to rudeness had settled over him. It made her uneasy.

Teck was serving the breakfast. It was a good breakfast, tastefully prepared and attractively served.

"I've missed Patrick this morning. Where is he?" Doris asked.

Teck answered. "I let him out early this morning. I was afraid he might waken Doctor, here. He likes to prowl around in the storm."

"And it's a good thing he does," Doris told George after Teck had gone from the room. "If Patrick hadn't liked to prowl around I wouldn't be here this morning."

George had been sipping coffee, watching the girl closely. He set his coffee cup down now, deliberately. "Doris—I've—I've been thinking."

His gravity puzzled the girl. She tried to make light of it. "Thinking, George, is a good thing for any of us to do."

Masculine like, George waded into his task abruptly. "Doris, how does it happen that a girl, a pretty girl like you—got herself lost in a mountain snowstorm?"

"Maybe the fairies dropped me, George," Doris bantered, but somehow she did not feel humorous.

"Be serious. How did you happen to be lost last night?"

"I suppose I lost my sense of direction."

"Where did you leave the coupe?"

Doris parried with another question. "How did you know I drove a coupe?"

"Perhaps I just guessed."

"Well, then, I did."

"Where did you leave it?"

"George, listen, what kind of an inquisition is this?"

The man got up, stood watching her gravely. "Not any kind of an inquisition. I'm just asking you for your own good."

"Well, then, suppose I got almost over the pass and realized the storm was coming very quickly?"

"Yes?"

"And then suppose I guessed, accurately, too, that I couldn't make it. Besides, I was afraid to drive on when the road wound around so abruptly and there were no guard rails."

"That's easy enough to suppose. There are places on the road that are hazardous even in the sunniest weather."

"All right, then. Suppose that I turned off on a trail that I thought I recognized—to—to—say to go to a cabin I knew about—"

"And then lost the trail?"

"Yes. That's the whole story until Patrick found me and you came."

"But the car?"

"You can find the car somewhere down on the trail from where you found me. If you know where you found me then you can find the car not more than a few hundred yards away."

"In what direction?"

"I don't know. If had known I would have gone back to it, wouldn't I?"

"I suppose so." George walked over to the mantel, stood there, watching his guest. He realized that he wasn't getting very far with his interrogations.

"Listen, Doris," he said at last as a brother might speak to a younger sister, hiding his impatience. "You'll believe that I want to help you, won't you?"

Doris laughed and helped herself to another crisp strip of bacon. "Yes, I will believe it. Otherwise you wouldn't be letting me eat pounds and pounds of bacon when it's so high that it's a luxury that poor 'workin' goils' rarely have these days."

"Be serious, Doris. You know that I want to help you."

Yes. I believe that you do." Doris had dropped her bantering tone.

"Then tell me the whole story."

"The whole story? I told it to you. I was trying to drive across the pass. I was afraid that I couldn't make it in time and I turned off on a trail that unfortunately I didn't know even if I'd thought I knew. Then Patrick found me. That's all."

"Not quite all." George faced her accusingly. "It isn't quite all. You haven't told me the whole story."

Say These Happy, Sensible Women

WHAT is so terrible about growing older? Aren't we all doing it every day in the year? Most women have more leisure after fifty than they ever had before. Wouldn't it be great if we could just ENJOY ourselves . . read all the books and magazines we want to . . see the new movies . . drive our own cars . . travel when we feel like it . . play with our grandchildren . . be active in church work . . lodge work . . politics?

WE CAN! Middle age CAN be happy, useful, and delightful if our health is good. There's the secret.

Do you dread middle age? Do you suffer from "hot flashes," blue spells, nervousness, and all the other irregularities which are symptoms of the Change of Life? Take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound regularly for awhile. It will quiet your nerves, induce restful sleep, tone up your system, and help you over this critical period. Life will seem worth living again.

By their own statements, this famous medicine has benefited thousands of women who were enduring just such troubles as you are. Get a bottle today.

"I Had to Lie Down Every Two Hours" says Mrs. Thom's

"There never were truer words spoken than when they say '98 out of 100 women report benefit from taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound'. Our home is never without it. A lady in the hospital told me about it. I was suffering from Change of Life and high blood pressure. I had to lie down every two or three hours. Since I took it I feel ever so much better and I certainly recommend it to other women at this time of life." —Mrs. A. Thom's, 4151 N. Darien St., Philadelphia, Pa.

Liquid and Tablets

"I Am 45 Years Old"

"I work in a cotton mill and I am now going through the Change. I have been using the Vegetable Compound for four years and it has been a great help to me. I would have used it sooner if I had known about it. Now every month when I feel nervous or ill I start taking it and it isn't long until I feel different."

Mrs. I. E. Warren,
Route 3, Jackson, Tennessee

"I Am 51 Years Old"

"My back and sides hurt me continually until I took the Vegetable Compound. I could not stand any hard labor. Every day I had to lie down. When I had taken only one bottle I felt like a young woman again. My head and back seldom bother me now. I think that every woman should know about this medicine."

Mrs. R. E. Mills,
Hector, Arkansas

Helped at Change of Life

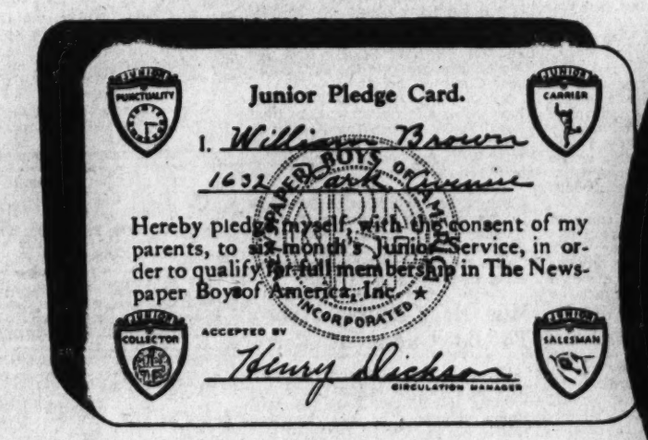

"Your medicine has helped me in every way at Change of Life. My strength was gone. My breathing was hard at times. My nerves were all broken down. Housework was a dread. I wanted to be alone and quiet. My friends told me about your medicine and I also read your ads. I have taken three bottles of this Vegetable Compound. I feel stronger in every way and my nerves are quiet."

Below is shown the N. B. A. Junior Pledge Card with the four Merit Seals each Junior must win, in order to become a Senior.

No other paper in this city can give you the benefit of N. B. A.-Trained Newspaper Boy Service.

Out to Win His 4 Junior Seals!

EVERY day, since our carrier-salesmen were made members of the N. B. A.—The Newspaper Boys of America—subscribers are telling us that they see a big improvement in the way our boys perform their daily newspaper duties.

Perhaps you, too, have noticed that your carrier delivers your paper more punctually, that he collects for it more courteously, and that he is more anxious to give you speedy, dependable newspaper service.

Here's the reason! As members of the N. B. A., all our newspaper boys are eager to win the four Junior Merit Seals offered for punctuality and efficiency in delivering, collecting and selling their papers. Each boy must win these four Seals before he can become a Senior and receive the beautiful N. B. A. Belt Buckle, Senior Certificate or any of the 14 N. B. A. Honor Medals.

So, this improvement in your carrier is not a temporary thing, but the beginning of an entirely new and better newspaper-boy service, which will give you increasing satisfaction as your boy advances in the N. B. A. ranks and training.

You can help him succeed, by getting to know him better, and encouraging him to win all his Junior Seals quickly, so he can soon become a Senior Newspaper Boy.

N. B. A. CEREMONIAL MEETING

Tonight and Wednesday night your carrier will attend the second ceremonial meeting of his N.B.A. Club, where Merit Seals and Honor Medals will be presented by a guest speaker.

75 Make Bow At Cotillion, First of Year

Lyric at Baltimore Scene of Opening Bachelors Ball.

By Jessie Ash Arndt.

More than 75 debutantes made their bow to society last night at the first Bachelors' Cotillion of the season at the Lyric Theater in Baltimore. Among them, Miss Carlile Porter, daughter of Brig. Gen. and Mrs. David D. Porter, wh was presented earlier in the season both here and in Philadelphia; Miss Mary McKim Crane, daughter of Lieut. Col. and Mrs. John A. Crane, of Fort Myer, and Miss Anna Lodge Minot, great-granddaughter of the late Senator Henry Cabot Lodge and daughter of Mr. Grafton Minot, of Boston, and Mrs. Presley M. Taylor, of Philadelphia.

Lovely old brocades, gold candelabra, masses of Southern smilax and bouquets of the debutantes' flowers assembled in magnificent profusion, formed the setting for the historic "Monday German" inaugurated nearly 100 years ago, a function at which many of the young ladies' mothers and grandmothers also had been presented to society.

One of the debutantes, Miss Terry Camperio, was there from Rome, with her mother, Mrs. Phillips Camperio. She came to make her bow in Baltimore as her mother had before her and they are guests there of Mrs. Spalding Lowe Jenkins.

Guests of Mrs. Gordon.

Miss Porter and her mother are guests while in Baltimore of Mrs. Alexander Gordon. Miss Porter wore to the cotllion a gown of heavy white satin with a corsage of white orchids and lilies of the valley, and carried American beauty roses.

Miss Alice Noel Tuckerman was escorted by Prince Osmond and before the dance they attended a dinner given by Mrs. Richard White. Miss Tuckerman was the guest over night of Mrs. George H. Williams, and Mr. and Mrs. Tuckerman, of Mr. and Mrs. Julian Jones, who entertained at dinner for them last evening preceding the dance. Miss Tuckerman's gown was of heavy white satin with rhinestone straps and she wore a corsage of white camellias and carried an old-fashioned bouquet.

Miss Ruth Dove, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Carter Dove, who was escorted by Mr. Thomas Hughes, of Baltimore, was guest of honor at a dinner given preceding the dance by his mother, Mrs. Reeder Hughes. Miss Dove, whose cousin, Miss Harriet Parker, is one of the Baltimore debutantes, wore white chiffon made on Grecian lines with emerald shoulder clips and a sash of green velvet, tying at one side and falling to form a train. She also wore a tiara of seed pearls.

Miss McKenna Honored.

Miss Martha McKenna, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Royal McKenna, who is home from Wellesley College and will make her debut during the holidays, was honored at a dinner given by her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Edgar D. Edmonston. Her gown was a French model of white slipper satin, with which she carried an old-fashioned bouquet of red rosebuds framed in white gardenias.

Miss Mary Senate Howes, daughter of the Acting Postmaster General and Mrs. William W. Howes, whose escort was Mr. John Stuart, was guest of honor at a dinner at which Mr. James Smith was host at the Belvedere Hotel in Baltimore before the dance. Among the guests were also Miss Gloria Grosvenor, who wore white taffeta, trimmed in gold medallions, and was escorted by Lieut. Carl Peden; Mrs. Neitah King, Miss Laura Johnson, and Miss Suzanne Kappler. Among the debutantes of former seasons at the cotillion were Miss Silvine Clagett and Miss Randolph Richardson. Miss Bette Hartz was also among this year's debutantes from Washington who attended and was escorted by Mr. John Dwight Kendall, jr. Miss Margaret Lillington Boyden, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Hanson Boyden, of Washington and Prince Georges County, was another of the debutantes attending.

Roger Makins Off On Visit to Davis Estate in Florida

Mr. and Mrs. Roger Makins, who have been the guests of Mrs. Makins' sisters, the Misses Cynthia and Helen Davis, at their residence on Foxhall road since Thursday, left today to join Mr. and Mrs. Dwight F. Davis on their plantation in Tallahassee, Fla.

Last night the Misses Davis entertained about 40 at dinner in honor of the Makins, who have been honored at several functions during their visit here.

Gov. Winship and Maj. Heath are also off today for a week of shooting on the Davis' Florida plantation.

Married Yesterday—Miss Corby and Dr. Franges

Harris & Ewing.

The Minister of Yugoslavia, Mr. Constantin Fotitch, the bride and bridegroom, Dr. and Mrs. Ivan Franges, and Miss Eleanor Corby, snapped after the wedding that took place yesterday at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. William Steven Corby.

THE MERRY WHIRL by MARYLYN

Marjorie Walsh is never still for very long. About a week ago she came to town just in time for the Black and White Ball. Now she has made plans for visiting the tropics—on January 9, with Mrs. William Laird Duplon, she will sail from the City of the Golden Gate, aboard the S. S. Burline for—of all places—Honolulu. That is they will be sailing if (that little word which means so much) the longshoremen permit them. Marjorie has never been to Hawaii and what a treat she has in store! Waikiki—exotic orchids that grow wild in long sprays—ginger blossoms, leis—leis—everywhere. Lazy days in the sunshine—long drives out past fields of cane and pineapple. Oh, what a lucky pair!

Saw Marjorie having cocktails in the Mayflower Lounge with Bill Todd the other afternoon. She had just been up in the air—aboard the blimp which is a familiar sight about here. She was wearing a good-looking suit of plum shade, trimmed with smoky fox.

• • • •

And still another wedding to take its place on the calendar. We have been hearing rumors of the soon-to-be-announced engagement of Peggy Speir to a young chap now at West Point, whose cousin was one of the most popular debtuantes of year before last.

• • • •

Well, well, word has come of Delk Simpson who has turned his talents to newspaper work down in Virginny. He always said he wanted to have his own paper and it looks as though he is really headed in that direction.

• • • •

Jack Parker is back and full of news of the wedding of sister Patsy, to Martin Maloney out in San Francisco. According to Jack, the Parker family is still trying to count the gifts. Marjorie Parker Williams is remaining out there with the senior Parkers, planning to return here when the ice and chill winds have been replaced by signs of springtime.

• • • •

The Leiter family was having their noon repast at Pierre's the other day. Nancy, in black wool crepe with a gorgeous silver fox wrapped about her shoulders, was with a group of her friends on the Connecticut avenue side, all talking gaily over their parfaits. Mrs. John R. Williams and Mrs. Leiter were in their favorite corner. Both had chosen black, Mrs. Leiter's gown having intriguing silver buckies at the belt—great, round shield affairs. Her mother's costume had an added bit of color in the bright blue feathers on her hat.

Dinner for Naval Group Is Planned By Admiral, Wife

Rear Admiral and Mrs. Norman Murray Smith are entertaining this evening at dinner at the Chevy Chase Club in honor of Admiral and Mrs. William H. Standley. Their other guests will be Rear Admiral an Mrs. William S. Pye and the Washington group of the Civil Engineer Corps of the Navy.

Tomorrow Admiral and Mrs. Smith have asked a few old friends of Rear Admiral Clarence Selby Kampff to greet him at dinner at their home, 2400 Wyoming avenue, during his brief stay in the city.

Thursday they will be hosts at another party, having invited about 20 in for cocktails in honor of their cousins, the J. Kenneth Caldwells, here for a few days from Tientsin, China, where Mr. Caldwell is consul general.

Miss Mary Hume, Fiance To Be Guests at Party

Mr. and Mrs. Fontaine Bradley will entertain at a supper party this evening for Miss Mary Murray Hume, daughter of Mrs. Rawlins Hume, and Dr. Thomas Bradley, son of Mrs. Thomas Bradley, whose wedding will take place on Friday afternoon at 4 o'clock in Christ Church, Georgetown. Mr. Fontaine Bradley is a brother of the prospective bridegroom.

Jacksons Issue 'At Home' Cards

Assistant Attorney General and Mrs. Robert Houghwout Jackson have issued cards for an "at home" Sunday afternoon at their new residence on River road. They moved there the first of November from the Wardman Park, where they had been for three years.

Their home is on the site of the original old Bradley Farm and is an estate of 12 acres, opposite Bradley Farms, where the Riding and Hunt Club hounds meet.

One of the reasons the Jacksons chose the place was its location, for Miss Mary Margaret Jackson, their 15-year-old daughter, a student at National Cathedral School, is a riding enthusiast and a skillful young horsewoman. She has a new hunter, Happy, which has been added to the Jackson's stables since they moved to the country, and rides quite regularly with the hunt. Mr. and Mrs. Jackson and their son, William Eldred, a student at St. Alban's, also enjoy riding, but their daughter is the only member of the family who hunts.

Judge Clarence Norton Goodwin has returned to Washington from a visit in Chicago.

Justine Corby Becomes Bride Of Dr. Franges, of Yugoslavia

Ceremony Is Performed by Bishop Freeman at Chevy Chase Circle Home; Couple Will Sail for Belgrade to Make Home.

By Dudley Harmon.

An international wedding took place yesterday when Miss Justine May Corby, daughter of Mrs. William S. Corby and the late Mr. Corby, was married to Dr. Ivan Franges, retiring Secretary of the Legation of Yugoslavia. The ceremony was performed by the Bishop of Washington, the Rev. James E. Freeman, in the drawing room of the bride's home on Chevy Chase Circle.

The marriage took place before a large bay window, the red velvet curtains of which were held back with white calla lilies. Mr. Archer Gibson, of New York, played the organ in the home during the ceremony and the reception which followed.

Wears Brocade Gown.

The bride was given in marriage by Mr. Glifford K. Berryman, a close friend of the family. She wore a gown of white and gold brocade with a brief train and short sleeves. Her tulle veil, which covered her face and fell halfway to the hem of her dress, was edged with gold stitching and held in place by a wreath of small orchids. The same flowers in shades of white and gold formed the spray which she carried.

The maid of honor and only attendant was the bride's sister, Miss Muriel Eleanor Corby, whose gown of multi-colored Persian brocade was fashioned like that of the bride. She wore a short veil similar to her sister's, held in place with a wreath of small gold and rose orchids. She also carried gold and rose orchids.

Three hundred guests were present at the reception. Assisting were Mme. Fotitch, wife of the Minister of Yugoslavia; Mrs. Harry H. Woodring, wife of the Secretary of War; Mrs. Gilbert Grosvenor and Mrs. Whitman Cross, who took turns at the tea table. Great lilies and pink and yellow roses formed the decorations throughout the house.

Dr. Franges and his bride will sail immediately for Belgrade, where the bridegroom has been assigned to duty at the foreign office.

The bride was graduated from the Montessori School and the National Cathedral School, and attended Wellesley College. She is expected to return to Washington from Belgrade for a few weeks in February.

Dr. Franges was educated in Yugoslavia, Vienna and Berlin. He is the son of Dr. and Mme. Oto Franges, of Yugoslavia. His father is a member of the Yugoslav Senate and a former member of the cabinet of his country.

Trip Is Planned By Mrs. Bunker

Mrs. Frances Wilkinson Bunker, whose marriage to Signor Augusto Rosso, Italian Ambassador to Moscow, will take place in January, will leave on Saturday for Clarksburg, W. Va., where she will be the guest of Mr. and Mrs. John Kennedy for a brief visit. Mr. and Mrs. Kennedy made their home in Washington until they moved to Elkins, W. Va., to occupy Gracelands, the house built by her grandfather, the late Henry Gassaway Davis. They spend the summer here and the winters in Clarksburg.

Mrs. Bunker is godmother of their young son, Patrick Henry Kennedy, who will be christened on Saturday. She will return on Sunday to attend the dinner which Mrs. George Barnett will give in her honor that evening at her home on Rhode Island avenue. On December 19 Mrs. Bunker will leave for Chicago with her children to spend the Christmas holidays with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. George L. Wilkinson in Evanston.

On her return there will be several more parties in her honor. The Minister of Austria and Mme. Prochnik will give a dinner on January 16 for Mrs. Bunker, and on January 20 she will sail with her father and mother on the Berengaria for Paris, where she will be married at the Italian Embassy.

Mrs. Bunker was the guest of honor at a dinner given last evening by the Naval Attache of the Italian Embassy and the Marchioness of Sant'Orsola. Mrs. Rufus Peckham, of New York, who has been visiting Mrs. Bunker, will return today to her home.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Correspondents Assure "Impossible" She Is Not Alone in Suffering "Black Moods."

When a young woman who is happily married to "the nicest kind of husband" and has "an adorable son over a year old" is visited with recurrent "black moods which sometimes last several days or even a week," what is she to think or do about it? Such a question was posed in this column some time ago by a distressed correspondent, who concluded her appeal for help by saying: "What I would most like to know is this: Do many of your young women readers feel this way? If they do, or have, I wish some kind souls would come forward with a solution." Many correspondents have testified her experience is not unique, and today's column is devoted to comment on the subject. M. H.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: No one seems to have responded to the cry of "Impossible," whose case you diagnosed in your column of November 4 as being one of frustration. I could have taken her into my arms as a long lost or recently discovered daughter, since there is about that difference in our ages. How many times in the past 25 years, while doing the kind of job she outlines, have I felt the same way for no more explainable reason!

• • • •

It may be no consolation to "Impossible" to learn that I haven't solved the problem. It seems to me a deeper one than simply finding adequate outlet for one's creative energies. For it involves the choice of accepting motherhood as a job for probably 25 years, or hiring it done if you have the money or can earn enough to pay someone to do the job for you.

• • • •

The mid-Victorian "conditioning" I received made me accept the mother's job, possibly because I hadn't found a more soul-satisfying outlet for my creative energies. It may be I could have contributed something more valid to the world, but I suspect I should have merely held down another "job." Anyway, it has consoled me not a little to hear a thoughtful and sophisticated New Yorker remark, after watching the career-women who tried to have both children and a career, that they usually succeeded at one job or the other, but never at both. And if both can't be done, then I feel justified in having put my children first, since through no choice of their own they came under my jurisdiction and it was up to me to care for them.

There will be plenty of voices to say it can be done, as well as examples to prove it. True enough. I hereby except women of exceptional ability and genius, women with plenty of money and women with exceptional endurance, physically and spiritually. No doubt there are some. But I am thinking of my real estate neighbor whose three little boys go to school untidy and are gathered in after school by a loving, childless neighbor who tells them stories and teaches them songs. And of another mother who lectures to mother's groups in Parent-Teacher Associations while her adolescent daughter becomes a problem.

• • • •

Has a study ever been made of the children of career-mothers? Is there any correlation between maladjusted children and career-mothers? Or between maladjusted children and "frustrated" mothers? In the long run biologically, I suspect we self-conscious mothers will all be eliminated by an upsurge of progeny from unselfconscious mothers who have 'em and nurse 'em and ask nothing about the whichness of the why.

By all means read Dr. Bisch's book and be glad you're neurotic, "Impossible," but in the meantime watch your mental hygiene and see if you aren't sort of enjoying an emotional jag of feeling sorry for yourself just now and then.

TURNED FIFTY.

Found Work Helped.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: This letter may not help "Impossible" in any way other than to let her know there is at least one other soul who has suffered miserably with "black moods." My circumstances were much like hers except that I had no children. A feeling of the futility of life swept over me two years ago. Nothing seemed worth while any longer. At least not the life I had been living—full of parties, cards, dances, etc.

• • • •

One thought constantly ran through my mind: "I must get out and do something with my life." But when I tried to think what to do I was stuck. All avenues of approach seemed to close. The harder I tried the worse things seemed to get until I finally ran into a sort of dead-end. I got down on my knees and prayed to be shown what to do. My husband was kind and patient. My father had a remarkable insight into human nature. Between all these forces I was pulled out of the mire.

• • • •

The same sound advice given by Miss Haworth to you, "Impossible," was given to me, and by following it I really worked wonders. May I add just one word to that advice—join some organization that is open to everyone. Do this whether you want to or not. Force yourself to do things you never thought you could care for before. At first you may feel unsuited to your associates and the work, but one thing leads to another in a surprisingly close-knit chain of events, until suddenly you find yourself in the right work, associated with congenial persons. I became associated with a Nation-wide organization for disaster relief and it opened so many doors for me that I hardly know which door to approach . . . I find it difficult to express myself on paper, but I hope this will help you a little. SANDRA.

Housewife's Predicament.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Perhaps it will help "Impossible" to know that I, who am considered quite normal and, like her, am happily married, have suffered from the same type of melancholy moods. I believe few realize what a shock marriage is to a girl. She has generally lived her whole life postponing all serious decisions until she is "grown up and married." Life seems a transient sort of thing, very jolly, no cares, no responsibilities. Whenever she feels blue, she looks forward to love and marriage to solve all difficulties. Alas, she soon learns it does not, and that, on the contrary, more crop up, while the dentist remains as frightening as ever.

• • • •

Many adjustments have to be made. Motherhood overwhelms her with its immensity of pain and bliss and its numerous claims. She has left her girlhood confidantes behind, and perhaps her job, as well as daily opportunities for stimulating contacts. She vaguely senses a loss and for this reproaches herself, for has she not her husband and her baby?

• • • •

When a woman has tended her home and family all day she longs to breathe the outside air as evening approaches. But then her husband is home, affectionate and tired, ready to fall asleep in his chair. So much for stimulating conversation! Perhaps she does not shine as a housekeeper either. Perhaps the weary round of washing dishes and soiling them again gives her a feeling of hopeless futility. These things don't come as naturally as breathing. We do them with effort and distaste, often wondering why humans ever gave up eating grass. Perhaps, too, we feel a little discontented because marriage seems to demand so much of us, while our husbands carry on as well as ever. But these are foolish thoughts, for we have privileges he is denied. The baby's first smile, his first word is ours, while father is inking his fingers at the office.

I personally am not inclined to think these melancholy moods can be attributed entirely to frustrated creative instinct, although I do think things get lots better when the wife can participate in activities outside the home. I think the cure, in some measure, lies in settling questions we are inclined to evade. We must decide whether we believe in a God Who is good and Who looks after us, or whether we think that all is vanity. We have to realize there is evil in this world, and decide what we as individuals are going to do about it. We have to become mature persons and active citizens. Sincerely,

Alice Keith Warns That Inflection Is Most Vital Factor.

By Ethel Ehlen,
The Post Fashion Editor.

PERHAPS you are not the woman you think you are—or the world believes you to be! One way to check up on your real personality, according to Alice Keith, director of the National Academy of Broadcasting, is to speak through the microphone and have a recording made of your voice. You may have thought of yourself as a mousey little person and discover that your world-weary voice decrees that you are really sophisticated.

"Radio training has values not only for the improvement of the speaking voice, but in making people organize their thinking; eliminating excess material in talks and using colorful words," explained Miss Keith. "Old-fashioned oratory is fast becoming archaic and long-winded flowery speeches sound ridiculous in these modern times."

This venture in broadcast teaching, which started this fall, is far-reaching, including diction, voice placing before the microphone and preparing talks, interviews, plays and musical programs. It also covers the theoretical and practical phases of radio, its courses being divided between the King-Smith Playhouse and a broadcasting studio.

Voices Better Now.

Prejudice against women's voices on the radio, Miss Keith says, is due to the sad experiences during the early days of radio when voices could not be adjusted properly by the mechanism. The majority of women having high-pitched voices, added to fright, made the result in many cases unpleasant. With modern radio reception, Miss Keith contends, women's voices can be, and are, as easy to listen to as men's.

"Naturalness should be the aim of every person who is called upon to appear before the microphone, either as a guest or in a chosen career," advised Miss Keith. "There should be conscientious rehearsals, study of technique, and talks should never be ghosted. In writing your own script, it is a big step toward attaining naturalness." Women, according to Miss Keith, are prone to put on their "company manners" when broadcasting, and this makes their voices sound too, too sweet and patronizing However, many men, she maintained, read words that are ghosted without any portrayal of sincere emotion.

"Your voice over the air tells the world a lot about you," Miss Keith said. "Certain traits of character show plainly through this medium, such as age, culture, sincerity, secret sorrow, executive ability, tenseness, conceit, lack of courage, cruelty, sympathetic understanding." To verify this, she explained that in broadcasting studios voices to fit the program are carefully selected. For instance, a vital voice for current events, historical talks and the like; cultured voices for anything pertaining to literature; an Oxfordian tone for highbrow talks, and a kindly (uncle-type) voice for children's stories.

"Inflection is the paramount issue in all voices," explained Miss Keith. "Volume in excess or in deficiency may mean that a person is either too bold or too timid. Emotions, experience, disposition, poise also are included in this category. A relaxed, slow, poised voice usually means you are that kind of person. Culture is emphasized by your pronunciation and enunciation."

The voice is just about the most neglected of the human faculties, Miss Keith believes. And because it means so much to the personality, she maintains it should be given more consideration. "The voice is flexible and can be cultivated; if it is pleasing to begin with, there is always room for improvement, and if it is harsh, shrill and generally unpleasant, something should certainly be done about it," she emphatically remarked.

Avoid Monotonous Pitch.

Monotonous pitch, the "talking down in your boots," is a fault which so many persons possess, Miss Keith asserted. Her recommendation for a correction of bad pitch is to read aloud the Shakespeare sonnets. To correct the "jumble word voice," students are given tongue twisters as an exercise. Here is one of them that you might try on your own voice: "Theophilus Thistle, the successful thistle sifter, in a sieve full of unsifted thistles, thrust 3,000 thistles through the thick of his thumb."

"In a city such as Washington, where there are people from every State in the Union, and dialectics run rampant, teaching radio diction becomes quite a complicated task," Miss Keith said. "There is the tenseness of the North, the drawl of the South, stiff chin posture of some Easterners and rapid speech of the Middle West. Of course there are lovely voices and those not so lovely from every part of the country, and, naturally, the majority of persons do not want to loose their native accent. The goal then becomes one in which a characteristic is accented, and incorrect diction, slur of words and other faults of speech are corrected."

Radio Influencing Voices.

Microphone technique is undoubtedly influencing all kinds of speaking and radio listeners are becoming super-critical. Besides special studying to improve the speaking voice, authorities also recommend singing lessons—gone into from the viewpoint of a general cultivation of the voice. Asked about the future for women in radio, Miss Keith said, "Yes, there is a future for women in radio—all phases of radio—but it is as precarious as a career on the stage or a newspaper."

Miss Keith came into radio work by way of music, having been supervisor of music appreciation in the Cleveland, Ohio, city schools for a number of years. Later, she became director of educational activities for the Radio Corporation of America, and broadcasting director of the American School of the Air. She has written hundreds of scripts that have been produced on radio, and numerous magazine and newspaper articles on the subject of broadcasting. Lecturing has also been included in her radio activities, and she has not only directed many amateur plays, but has had experience on the legitimate stage in Washington. She has written four text books on radio.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes.

New York, Dec. 7.

EVEN THOUGH frost nips the noses and chills the bones of its practitioners, strike picketing continues to be one of the most noteworthy public phenomena in this brawling town, where a half-dozen explode every day. Visitors are inevitably shocked by the constant parade of walking sign bearers on the busiest and smartest shopping streets. True, the situation is not as appalling as it was during the depths of the late depression, when there were more pickets than shoppers on Fifth avenue, and the psychological effect on the peaceful citizens was slightly more than terrific, leading to frequent nightmares of barricades, gas bombs and machine gun fire. But it is still tough enough.

ALICE HUGHES.

Our fur and garment districts, cities in themselves, seem to be always striking, with the gendarmes afoot and ahorse, forcing footpaths through the milling, shouting hordes. My favorite strike, during the past year, was that of the local Exterminators' Union—chiefly because the constant parade of strike pickets before Mr. Rockefeller's new, beautiful and clean RCA Building in Radio City was so lavishly ironic. As though a rodent or a bug would dare show itself amid such magnificence! Perish the ruddy thought!

My fellow citizenesses are ardent pickets. Wearing red berets and leather jackets, they will march and shout when and as needed. Only the other day a large delegation of devoted women from over the river in Brooklyn invaded City Hall Park, with suitable signs, pleading for the relocation of a public school. "Should our children be the victims of a realtor?" read one of the banners. One thing people here learn young—the technique of mass demonstrations!

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—With the upturn in the debutante market a fact and not a dream, no less than 400 18-year-old girls are making their party bows and curtsies this season—and now the ax is falling on this crowd! About 25 years ago Mrs. Arthur Murray Dodge started three small dances yearly, called "Junior Assemblies." Now they have become instruments for picking the top 125 of the seasons deb mob. The current 125 have already been picked. The other 275, nursing their sorrow, realize that they have come out—but not quite far enough! . . .

Last and most fantastically tragic note on the daffy football season—Mrs. Anna Hartmann, 30, became embroiled in a frantic argument over the respective merits of the Penn and Cornell teams. It became so hysterical, at last, that Mrs. Hartman took a header out a third-story window, with the usual fatal results. Such a horrible, idiotic thing couldn't happen—but it really did! . . .

• • • •

The dance-lesson madness shows no signs of abatement. Arthur Murray, of here, has turned it into a major industry. He has over a hundred instructors of both sexes, and business and society people go to learn, as much for exercise as for social grace. Mary Lewis, major store exec, is taking tap, not because she expects to compete with Ruby Keeler, but because it makes her feel good. And I saw Cornelius Vanderbilt, jr., coming out of Arthur's the other day after his tango lesson. Neely says a tango is a great builder-upper . . .

"Southern Belle" fashions suddenly burst forth in the local style scene, featuring frills, furbelows and bonnets, and they're already a hit. Dopesters credit that amazing tome, "Gone With the Wind," for their arrival and acceptance, and they mutter the name of a Mrs. S., of Baltimore, as having something to do with the matter, too!

Flower Effect May Be Ruined By Bad Taste

FRESH FLOWERS have invaded the world of fashion and from all indications, seem to have attained a permanent place in the sartorial scheme of things. While flowers are always lovely in themselves, they should be worn with discrimination, or you may look like a country garden rather than a smart 1937 lady of fashion. Here are some rules for wearing flowers in the present mode:

Fragile looking flowers and filmy materials are harmonious; for sturdy materials, use more robust blooms.

A fresh posey worn on the lapel of a sports suit or coat is smart, but a complicated corsage of delicate flowers on the same lapel is incongruous.

Single blooms of the large variety soften the coldness of metal evening gowns and are preferred by many fastidious women to artificial flower arrangements.

To accompany the popular period-influenced gown, flowers should be worn with dignity. Orchids atop the head promote the regal look and white ones are particularly smart.

Beware of too much ribbon, fern or greenery of any kind.

Watch Your Speech

WHETHER in social contacts, business contacts or every-day affairs, you are constantly being sized up by others through your speech. Just as you judge others, so are you judged. You either speak interestingly, or you are a fumbler of words.

So many people have difficulty with the word municipal, pronouncing it as mu-ni-SIP-al when the correct form is mu-NIS-i-pal. Check your pronunciation of such words as gratis, genuine, era, orgy. The correct form is GRAY-tis, JEN-u-in, EE-ra, OR-ji.

It isn't at all hard to learn correct pronunciation of all words. The secret is in getting them fixed in your own mind so that you see the word separated in your mind's eye when you want to pronounce it.

Besides a good appearance and liveliness of manner, a woman must have the ability to talk with confidence, correctly pronounce her words and write with accuracy and distinction.

To learn how doesn't require a college course, or even going back to school. She can get correct guidance in her pronunciation through our new 40-page booklet, "Words Most Often Mispronounced." It fits in the pocketbook—handy to glance at while riding on train, car or bus. Or at luncheon or during any idle moment. Memorizing only a few words daily will do marvels toward correcting not only pronunciation but also increasing vacabulary.

Today's HEALTH TALK

By
Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

Alkali Poisoning.

A few weeks ago a male patient, aged 53, was admitted to a hospital. For more than a dozen years he had complained of "stomach trouble" and had formed the habit of taking four teaspoonfuls of baking soda sodium carbonate) each day. As a rule this would bring relief. A recent increase in stomach pain, however, led him to use more rather than less of the "medicine," and as a result he became conscious of a growing feeling of weakness. His appetite failed and his fellow workers noticed that he was not as keen as usual and was much more touchy.

At this time he decided to interview a psysician and was told, after a cursory examination, that he was probably verging on a nervous breakdown and should take a vacation. This was done, although the usual doses of alkali were employed during the entire period. He did not improve and upon his return decided to submit to a more careful physical inventory.

His urine was found to contain albumin and his eyes were definitely inflamed. A blood test showed that he was suffering from alkali poisoning. No treatment was required other than omitting the soda, and he made an uninterrupted recovery.

This case calls attention to the fact that we can take alkalis in too large quantities for too long a time. Some of us, perhaps, have become accustomed to using a little soda whenever we have gastric distress. We do this in preference to adopting a sensible hygienic regime of ating more slowly, omitting fried foods and other materials known to be indigestible—at least to us. We eat what we wish and then take alkalis. An occasional soda tablet is valuable when needed, but reliance upon drugs of any kind to aid digestion is cheating nature.

Physicians now recognize that alkali poisoning is not only possible, but is far more common than is generally supposed.

Care Is Needed To Bar Jealousy Of Youngsters

Newcomer to Family Offers Danger Unless Guard Is Provided.

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

MR. AND MRS. JONES prepared their children for the baby's arrival with all possible wisdom and foresight. As far as they could see there was no chance for future trouble caused by jealousy of the newcomer. The youngest of the flock, himself little more than a baby, was looking forward to being a protector of the new arrival.

But the Joneses forgot that there were other influences in the children's lives besides their own. It never occurred to them that the maid was taking pleasure in teasing the older children by telling them that "their noses would be out of joint;" and that when the baby arrived, grandma and all the aunts and uncles would deliberately snub the older children and center their attention on the newcomer.

Only years later when the children were grown did they let out the secret of their lifelong dislike of the new arrival. No doubt the baby as well as they themselves had suffered from the hidden antipathy of which their parents had no suspicion.

Children tell very little of what goes on out of their parents' sight, and they also reveal very little of their innermost thoughts and feelings. This is partly because they do not know how to put such things into words, and partly because they take the most astonishing things for granted.

It is impossible to guard children against the world. Constant watchfulness will help; so will a knowledge of one's children, and an open-minded readiness to receive stray confidences or unguarded comments. For the rest, parents can only hope that their own attitude and influence will be strong enough to counteract the undesirable influences from without.

Pleasant HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

THE NELSONS live in the nicest old house—the only catch is that there aren't half enough closets and those they have are too small.

"That means we have a lot of catch-alls around the house," said the lady Nelson. "Of course, cabinets and cupboards help a lot, but still we manage to have some corners that can't appear in polite society. I've solved that problem with screens.

"But a screen looks like a makeshift unless it's planned to fit into the room. We made our own screens so we could have them just right. In the living room we pasted some old flower prints in medallions on a screen we had painted dull green. Then we antiqued the whole thing and it looks just beautiful in our plum, gold and green room—exactly as if it belonged there.

"For the boys' room, the screen was covered with maps pasted down flat, then shellacked over. That was fine with their old furniture, which is painted bright, deep orange. The walls are gray and the rug is rust color and the bedspreads and curtains are blue. It's definitely a masculine room, and the boys are as proud as Punch over it. They've put up their own pictures, the usual boys' junk, such as football pictures, pennants and so on, but also they have some striking travel posters on the wall—they're crazy about geography, because they tie it up with Admiral Bryd, Lindy and some of their other heroes. That's where I got the idea for the screen.

"In my daughter's room, a sweet, blue and pink room with ivory furniture, the screen is covered with flowered wall paper and outlined with a narrow wall-paper border."

Brown Denies Report of Bank Account Quiz

Chief Says News Story of Detectives Result of False Rumor.

Police Chief Ernest W. Brown flatly denied yesterday published reports that an investigation is under way into the personal bank accounts and income-tax returns of members of the Detective Bureau.

After reading the report in an afternoon paper, Maj. Brown summoned Detective Chief Bernard W. Thompson and his assistant, Capt. Ira E. Keck, to his office. He said that both Thompson and Keck denied having any knowledge of probe.

The rumor became prevalent yesterday that Lieut. Floyd F. Truscott was checking the personal bank accounts of detectives as an aftermath of an inquiry conducted three months ago into reports of alleged graft among policemen.

Maj. Brown ordered a "thorough and confidential" check-up of graft rumors in September. Since that time, he said, all precincts and bureaus with the exception of detective headquarters had submitted reports.

"So far," Maj. Brown said, "there has been absolutely no evidence of any graft or corrupt practices in the department. Not a single case of graft was disclosed in any of the precincts."

The Detective Bureau report is being held up, the major said, due to persistent rumors that continually flood the bureau.

"Each time an investigator runs out one lead there is another that must be looked into," Maj. Brown explained.

The investigation was ordered after reports were circulated that certain detectives were shielding gamblers being sought by police in connection with the "racket" shooting of Joseph O'Brien.

German, Wife Arrested On Soviet Spy Charge

Berlin, Dec. 7 (U.P.).—The official news agency D. N. B. reported from Leningrad tonight that a German engineer, Hans Metzger, and his wife had been arrested by the Russian secret police on charges of espionage and counter-revolution.

Relations between Berlin and Moscow already are embittered over the arrest of 23 foreigners, mostly Germans, in the Soviet capital.

Restaurateurs Gather; Cheer Newest in Waitress Uniforms

Miss Mae Chalmson, hostess at the Washington Gas Light Co. exhibit at the convention of the National Restaurant Association, proffers a tidbit to Julius Lulley, of Harvey's Restaurant, president of the Washington Restaurant Association.

Washington cafes may well expect a terrific business upspurt if they adopt the waitresses' uniforms modeled yesterday in connection with the opening of the regional convention sponsored by the National Restaurant Association.

Hula hula costumes and filmy pantalettes of black chiffon evoked deafening applause at the "Uniform Fashion Show," which was sandwiched between a speech on college-educated restaurant operators and a pep talk by Commerce Secretary Daniel C. Roper.

Appearing first—the scene was the grand ballroom of the Hotel Mayflower—in conventional servitor's garb of white and colored linen, eight comely models later mounted the platform less heavily encumbered as tap dancers, truckin' dancers, hula hula dancers, toe and tap dancers, acrobatic dancers, etc.

It seemed that the preference, judged by volume of applause, was for decollete uniforms. It was not definitely explained whether these are standard equipment with the linen firm that sponsored the fashion show.

The promenade lobby, half the main dining room and the Chinese room of the Mayflower are chock full of convention exhibits. They include cocktail cherry spears, a bottle-smashing device, modernistic menus, the latest in china and practically everything else a restaurant can possibly use.

Julius Lulley, of Harvey's restaurant, is president of the Washington Restaurant Association, host organization. Opening the three-day session, he introduced Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen, who gave the municipal welcome; R. W. Steinberg, of Philadelphia, who told about Cornell University's college training course, and other speakers.

"In a dynamic civilizaton such as ours there is no standing still," the delegates were advised by Secretary Roper.

He reminded them that theirs is a highly important business, whose establishments throughout the United States increased in number from 134,293 in 1929 to 200,335 in 1933, then gained another 25 per cent between 1933 and 1935.

"While figures for 1936 are not available," he declared, "preliminary reports indicate that the volume trend has been consistently upward, with the consequent result that the year will be the best in the history of your business."

In a similarly optimistic vein were the remarks, made in an interview by R. D. Clark, president of the National Restaurant Association, who is here for the regional gathering.

"People are patronizing restaurants in greater numbers than ever before," said Clark, who operates a Cleveland chain. "Perhaps one of the reasons is that we are making eating places homelike, with soft lights and pleasant surroundings.

"In the old days we had to sell the customers on cleanliness. Now they rightfully assume the restaurant is clean and they must be attracted by other means—comfortable chairs, cheery atmosphere and so on, as well as good food and efficient service."

U. S. Hits Steel Labor Policies; C. I. O. Exults

Big Firm's Union Stand, Wage Accord Method Assailed by Board.

By the Associated Press.

John L. Lewis and his industrial union allies exulted yesterday as the Labor Relations Board accused the huge United States Steel Corporation of interfering with its employes' right to organize as they please.

In response to complaints by his steel workers organization committee and the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers; the labor board assailed United States Steel's present plan of employe representation.

It also severely criticized the method used in reaching a wage agreement recently put into effect by the Carnegie-Illinois Steel Corporation, United States Steel's largest subsidiary.

10 Per Cent Rise Provided.

That agreement provided a 10 per cent increase in wages, with a provision that wages during the next year should fluctuate up or down, not to exceed 5 per cent, as the cost of living varied.

The board said the Carnegie-Illinois Corporation insisted employe representatives approve the agreement "without submission of its terms to the employes."

After asserting the company's employe represenative plan had "many defects," the board said:

"No provision appears in it for collective meetings, and no opportunity for employes to cast votes on important problems such as wage agreements, or the submission of disputes to arbitartion.

"All expenses of the plan are borne by the company. Newly hired employes autmatically become members of the plan, and the company does not advise them of the existence in the plants of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Works.

Abuses Alleged.

"Employe representative elections under the plan are held on company property. The company permits incumbent employe representatives to campaign for re-election during working hours and at company expense. * * *

"The complaint states that foremen and superintendents having hire-and-fire powers openly ascertain the names of employes who failed to vote in a plan election.

"It is also stated that the bulletin boards are used to influence employes."

The board will conduct a hearing December 17.

On the Air Today

Yesterday morning The Post featured the story of little Betty Jaynes, 15-year-old soprano who won the acclaim of critics in Chicago for her performance of the role of Mimi in "La Boheme." It was her operatic debut.

Two weeks ago another soprano sang Mimi's role—and the critics were not so enthusiastic. Presumably they were the same critics for both versions of "La Boheme" were presented under the auspices of Chicago opera companies. The adverse verdict was given Amelita Galli-Curci, no less.

Courageous in the face of this criticism, the flashing spirit of the great Galli-Curci is undaunted. And next Sunday night she will be presented as guest soloist in the "Sunday Evening Hour" at WJSV. Following the performances of "La Boheme," Galli-Curci went to a radio studio and made several records of her once glorious voice. Eugene Stinson, critic of the Chicago Daily News, heard those records. And said: "Galli-Curci can sing! They contain the voice which the whole world was waiting to hear" when she tried her comeback as Mimi.

Whatever decision is correct, the radio audience will be able to judge for themselves. But Galli-Curci hopes to prove that the throat operation performed a year ago did not rob her of the voice that once charmed multitudes. She has sung on the air just three times in all her career.

The "Saturday Night Party" will replace Walter O'Keefe with guest comedians. Tom Howard and Ray Knight were booked for last Saturday night. Which reminds me: I heard Benny, Baker and Cantor last Sunday night and came definitely to the conclusion that a good gag-and-script man alone can not put a comedy half hour across. It being agreed that these three are sufficiently well established and have developed enough followers for their particular techniques to merit an unusually high rating of acceptance from their studio audiences. Baker's show apparently mired down. The laughs came up only at the end of sequences. Benny and Cantor, on the other hand, apparently had only to speak a line—and the crowds roared. Maybe Harry Von Zell's absence from the Baker show had something to do with it.

The first "program preference" poll forms returned yesterday showed that a large number will be required to untangle the leaders. I urge that you clip the form from the radio page of your Sunday Post and fill it in, mail to the Radio Editor, Washington Post, as quickly as possible. The first returns will be tabulated for next Sunday's Post. And the form will be reprinted then. But the more poll forms returned, the more accurate the cross section. You have an opportunity to name your 10 favorite programs and the "best" shows now on the air under the various classifications.

Social Security Panels.

One social security act problem not generally appreciated by the public, but which board officials fear may be their toughest nut to crack, is to be brought into the spotlight this week-end when the American Public Welfare Association holds a round table conference at the Wardman Park.

The problem has nothing to do with the principles of the act, its financing or any of the other things usually brought up when social security is discussed, but concerns the actual administration of the provisions through the States. Only a handful of the States are under civil service or have had much experience in the public assistance field and board officials fear not only inefficiency but that in some States the administration of social security may degenerate into a racket and thus discredit the whole business.

The act itself prevents the board from setting up standards of administration, but the board is ever ready with advice and is anxious to focus the attention of State administrators on better ways of doing things. This is the purpose of the Public Welfare Association's round table conferences Saturday and Sunday.

Every phase of the problem is to be discussed and those taking part read like a Who's Who of public welfare. Among the discussion missioner Leonard D. White on personnel problems; R. Gordon Wagenet, director of the S. S. B.'s Bureau of Unemployment Compensation, on unemployment compensation; Frank Bane, also with the S. S. B., public assistance legislation, and Louis Brownlow, chairman of the President's reorganization committee, on "Putting Merit into the Merit System." Helen Jeter, acting chief of the Division of Public Assistance Statistics of the S. S. B., is secretary for the group and will discuss public welfare statistics.

A new analysis of State unemployment compensation laws has just been completed by Wilbur J. Cohen, of the S. S. B.'s Bureau of Unemployment Compensation, with the assistance of Lynn E. Eldridge. The study was prepared under Merril G. Murray and Wagenet.

Appeals Chairman.

Charles R. Anderson, who is coming to Washington as the new head of the Civil Service Commission's Board of Appeals, is a 6-footer who tips the beams at close to 200 pounds . . . When he is feeling good his guests can prevail upon him to play the violin . . . and if he is feeling real good to sing.

Apart from his music, Anderson's interests center on his job and the American Federation of Government Employes, of which he is a vice president . . . His new job means he will have to drop the vice presidency and national headquarters will no longer receive those painstaking, methodical reports he would send in whenever asked . . . This will be Anderson's second stay in Washington, having served for several years as assistant secretary of the Fourth Civil Service District.

M. J. McAuliffe, whose post as appeals chairman Anderson is taking, will become the manager of the Fourth District. Farrar Smith, the present district manager, will become assistant to Chief Examiner Lawson A. Moyer—the job isn't exactly new, but will require more high-pressure work than before.

James P. Googe, who has been Moyer's assistant, becomes assistant manager of the Atlanta district. The present assistant manager, Clarence L. W. Edwards, has been promoted to fill Anderson's place as manager of the St. Louis district. The reason for the shifts is to strengthen the administration here in Washington.

Ellen Lewis, of the Department of Labor, has passed on this story to us as an illustration of the strange effects newspaper headlines have on young children. Ellen was walking toward Rock Creek Park late Saturday afternoon when she came across two small boys who were wrestling.

One of the lads seemed to have gained the upper hand, at any rate he was on top of his opponent.

"Have you had enough?" he yelled.

"No, I won't abdicate."

Postals.

Clifford F. Mayne, formerly in charge of publications for the Bureau of Fisheries, has been promoted to the post of chief of the division of publications and statistics for the Bureau of Marine Inspection and Navigation; Mrs. Barbara Aller is sitting at Mayne's desk for the time being . . . Mrs. Pansy Anderson, who as secretary of the Interior's space control section gets a lot of weird requests, had to disappoint one caller yesterday. It was a man, telephoning from a pay station for the Park Service's laborer division, and who demanded his nickel back when he learned he had the wrong number.

Secretary Wallace will speak before the American Farm Bureau Federation at Pasadena, Calif., tomorrow and AAA Administrator Howard R. Tolley on Thursday . . . Next Tuesday C. W. Kitchen, assistant chief of the Bureau of Agricultural Economics, will tell the Annual Fruit Growers and Farmers Convention at Bakersfield, Calif., that the buying power of the farmer is the highest in 17 years.

Farm Credit's Public Relations Division has been changed to the Division of Information and Extension, with Edwy B. Reed still in charge . . . REA is releasing the first of a series of film strips (not movies) to show the blessings of electricity on the farm . . . Guy D. Edwards, formerly in charge of Grand Teton National Park, will supervise the National Park Service's recreational program for the Boulder Dam area . . . Dr. Drusilla Kent, of the University of Tennessee, has joined the Office of Education's vocational division, while Beulah Koon does a little self-educating at Teachers College, Columbia University.

Oldest Inhabitants and Women Guests Honor Dead

Dupont Circle Association Hears Brown, Names Committee Heads.

A resolution asking for an increase of 300 men in the Police Department was adopted yesterday by the Dupont Circle Citizens Association after it heard a report of police conditions made by Maj. Ernest W. Brown.

William Floyd Crosby, chairman of the Police and Fire Departments committee, who drafted and presented the resolution, said:

"Since the Police Department has to spend much of its time directing traffic and attending private parties, embassy functions, funerals and protecting crosswalks for school children, an increase in Police Department personnel is imperative. The city in the last few years has increased its population by 131,000, yet only 25 policemen have been added to the department."

The policemen, he said, are taxed beyond their capacity to cope with increased gambling, robberies and vice in the city. The Police Department at the present time is comprised of 1,200 men and women.

Maj. Brown quoted figures and statistics to support his contention his personnel must be increased if it is to do efficient work.

The association appointed the following to head committees: Demarest Lloyd, taxation; Col. Frederick A. Delano, zoning; William F. Crosby, police and fire department; W. Herbert Gill, program; Mrs. E. G. Bliss, membership; Dr. B. L. Hardin, sanitation public health; Admiral William L. Rodgers, suffrage; Woodson P. Houghton, law and legislation; Harral Mulliken, admission; Harry M. Bedell, traffic; Col. Spencer Crosby, public utilities, and Dr. Ellery C. Stowell, education.

ABC Board Petitioned

Resolutions urging the ABC Board to notify them whenever applications are made for liquor licenses in their territories were passed last night by the Michigan Park Citizens Association and the Forest Hills Citizens Association, meeting in their respective sections of the city.

The Michigan Park resolution included places filing for licenses in adjoining territories and urged that all applications be displayed prominently. Beer and wine licenses should be in a different color, the organization said.

This group also recommended that new police headquarters be erected to replace the present one, and that a new building be constructed to house the Women's Bureau.

All employes in restaurants and cafes who handle food served to the public should be required to submit to a yearly medical examination, the Michigan Park group held, in still another resolution.

The Forest Hills Association recommended all citizens associations be notified when any particular association has a resolution to present before the Federation of Citizens Associations.

New School Urged

An appeal to the Bureau of the Budget for provision of funds for a new Northern High School building in their area was made last night by the Citizens Association of Takoma Park, D. C., in session at the Takoma Library branch.

The group indorsed action of association representatives in opposing rerouting of Takoma Park buses over Ninth street.

H. K. Kugel, District smoke engineer, spoke on abating the smoke nuisance in Takoma Park. It was voted to meet hereafter in Takoma (D. C.) School.

Dance Is Planned

The Kenilworth Citizens, meeting last night in the Kenilworth Recreation Center, voted to sponsor an invitation dance December 26. Mrs. Alma Hudson and Dolly Fitzgerald were elected delegates to the Northeast Conference of Citizens Associations.

San Jose, Calif., Dec. 7 (AP).—Purchase by Henry Ford of a large collection of American coaches and automobiles, harness, saddles and other transportation accessories for $25,000 was announced today by executors of the estate of Theodore Wohlbruck, who died here November 26.

'Oldest Inhabitants' Observe Group's Birthday at Banquet

Women Are Present for First Time at Session of Washington's Patriarchs; Fiscal 'Square Deal' Urged by Speakers.

The Association of Oldest Inhabitants celebrated its seventy-first birthday at a banquet at the Hotel Raleigh last night, with feminine guests present for the first time in the history of the organization.

Washington's patriarchs—all of them more than 50 years old, and all of them residents here for at least 50 years—sparkled with dinner conversation that recalled outstanding events in the city's history as far back as the Civil War.

For the most part, the women present were wives or daughters of members.

The members heard Theodore W. Noyes, president of the association; Paul E. Lesh, vice chairman of the Citizens Joint Committee for National Representtaion, and District Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen urge a "square fiscal deal" for the District from the Federal Government.

Lesh declared immediate, but perhaps temporary, financial equity could be obtained by backing the Citizens Joint Committee on Fiscal Relations.

A permanent solution to the financial problem could be had only by getitng voting representation in Congress for the District, Lesh said.

Calls for Vote.

Warning his hearers not to confuse the issue of national representation with that of local self-government, Lesh declared that "no reason which led to the setting apart of this Federal District can be advanced against giving its inhabitants voting representation in Congress and, through the electoral college, a voice in Presidential elections.

Citing the association's slogan, "Fiscal Equity and Political Equity for the District," President Noyes called for a fight for national representation and for voting representation in Congress and the Electoral College.

For determining the fair amount of the Federal contribution to the District, Commissioner Hazen offered a formula based on property ownership. At present, he said, 30 per cent of the property in the District is not taxable, either because it is owned by the Government or by nonprofitmaking institutions brought here because this is the Nation's Capital. He urged a tax on this property as the only fair method for local residents.

Edward F. Colladay, Republican national committeeeman, and Malcolm McConihe, Democratic national committeeman for the District, pledged themselves to cast aside political ties and to fight for the Norton representation bill scheduled to be brought before the next Congress.

Four women speakers, Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, president of the Board of Education; Mrs. William Kittle, president of the Voteless League of Women Voters; Mrs. Lloyd W. Biddle, president of the District Federation of Women's Clubs, and Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley, president of the Women's City Club, reiterated the views of the male speakers and expressed their appreciation of being invited to attend the association's birthday party.

A. F. L. Scored As 'Heirarchy' By D. C. Union

Aroused by what was termed "the rottenest legislation ever passed by the heirarchy of labor," the Central Labor Union last night adopted a resolution of protest to the American Federation of Labor, mother body, against laws adopted recently by that group at the Tampa, Fla., convention.

Irate members hurled cries of "fascism!" when Frank Coleman, secretary of the Central body and delegate to the A. F. of L. convention, told C. L. U. members that a rule was passed which provided that local bodies must get consent of unions holding national contracts before a firm with that contract could be put on the unfair list.

This, it was explained by C. E. Sands, a delegate, could be used to affect the autonomy of the central labor unions throughout the country. It would permit a firm having a national contract to refuse to hire local union labor if the national contract holders did not allow them to be boycotted, one of the local unions' most effective weapons.

Coleman, who voted against the regulation in Tampa, was thanked by the delegates and his report unanimously accepted.

The motion of protest to the secretary of the A. F. of L. was presented by Sands, of the bartenders union.

Printing Exhibit To Arrive Today

Invitations have been received by more than 1,000 persons here to attend a reception aboard the Printers' Progress special train at the Union Station today and tomorrow, when guests will be received from 11 a. m. until 9 p. m.

The train is, in reality, a rolling printery, which is commemorating 500 years" of progress in the graphic arts, since 1436, when Johann Gutenberg invented movable type.

Arriving from Richmond, the train, containing complete exhibitions by more than 25 companies of the latest in printing equipment.

Citizens Assail State Roads Unit

Charging the State roads commission had failed to acknowledge three requests for adequate warning to motorists at the "death trap" circle at Massachusetts and Western avenue, where four automobile crashes since April 1 have resulted in two fatalities, the Westmoreland Citizens Association last night authorized two resolutions directed at the road officials.

The first empowered the executive committee to prepare a resolution censuring the roads commission for "laxity in its duty to public safety."

The second requested the Montgomery County Civic Federation to go on record as requesting immediate action by State officials in the "death trap" situation.

J. A. Remon Re-elected President's Cup Head

Youth Is Held As Auto Toll Mounts to 89

Mrs. Lida M. Gridley Hit by Car Operated by 18-Year-Old.

Mrs. Lida M. Gridley, 55, of 5423 Connecticut avenue, was killed instantly late yesterday when she was struck by an automobile as she attempted to cross the intersection at Virginia avenue and Eighteenth street northwest.

Her death brought the 1936 traffic toll for the District to 89. Physicians pronounced her dead on arrival at Emergency Hospital.

Two men were injured in automobile crashes as a coroner's jury exonerated three motorists after inquests in two recent traffic deaths.

Leading Nation.

Other traffic developments were:

The District led the Nation in reduction of traffic fatalities during the first nine months of the year, it was announced by the Department of Vehicles and Traffic.

Corporation Counsel Elwood Seal and Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, conferred with Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen regarding accumulation of warrants and congestion of appeals from permit suspensions and revocations, but no decision was reached.

John Morrison, 70, of 806 Sixth street northwest, was treated at Emergency Hospital for multiple lacerations and bruises after he was knocked down by a truck at Sixth street and Massachusetts avenue northwest. The truck was operated by James H. Amick, 30, of 210 F street northwest, police said.

A collison between an automobile and a milk truck at Fourteenth street and Constitution avenue northwest sent Jeff A. Hicks, 30, of Alexandria, Va., to Emergency Hospital with a fracture of the right knee. Hicks, police said, was operating a car which collided with a truck owned by the Chestnut Farms Dairy. Robert L. Little, 29, of 537 Seventh street southeast, was reported as the driver of the truck.

Bernard R. Tolson, 51, of 6911 Sixth street northwest, and Roscoe J. Wolf, 21, of 932 K street northwest, were absolved from blame by a coroner's jury after a hearing into the death of Frank Reider, 23, of the K street address.

Motorman Exonerated.

Reider was killed Sunday when the car in which he was riding, operated by Wolf, collided with Tolson's automobile at Blair road and Van Buren street northwest. The force of the impact threw Reider out of the car.

In the second inquest the jury held accidental the death of James Jones, colored, 60, of 138 D street southwest, who died in Casualty Hospital Saturday after he was struck by a street car at Garfield Circle, First street and Maryland avenue southwest.

Robert F. Trammell, 40, of 4308 Ellicott street northwest, motorman on the street car, was released when it was testified the colored man walked in front of the car.

Tabulated figures from various sections of the country showed Washington leading the Nation with a 27 per cent decrease in highway deaths from January through September. During this period 61 persons were fatally injured in traffic mishaps, as compared with 84 the previous year.

Discouraging records during the last week, however, have tended to lower Washington's safety percentage, Van Duzer pointed out. Since December 1 eight persons have been killed in crashes.

Four driving permits were revoked and 22 suspended for temporary periods by the Revocations Board.

Thirty-day suspensions—Robert E. Dunn, 3514 Second street northwest, 48 miles; Elizabeth W. Sears, 2100 Nineteenth street northwest, 48 miles; Fred L. Silbersberger, 1938 Calvert street northwest, 44 miles; Alfred Stango, 1105 Fifth street northwest, 44 miles; Fenton Strange, 2137 L street northwest, 46 miles; Robert E. Taylor, 1715 First street northwest, 44 miles; Paul L. Tomardy, 1132 Fourth street southwest, 45 miles.

Short Suspensions.

U. S. Report Stresses Need for Office Space

The present governmental office and work space condition in Washington is called "serious" in the annual report of the National Parks Service which was submitted yesterday to Harold L. Ickes, Secretary of Interior.

Arno B. Cammerer, director of the bureau, which maintains and operates practically all of the Federal buildings in the Capital, said more room is needed even though 18,300,000 square feet is now in use. More than 2,000,000 is in leased private buildings.

Colorful Costumes, Handiwork Feature International Bazaar

Fifty Countries, 1,200 Individuals Represented in Eighth Annual Sale Sponsored by Americanization School Needy Alien Families.

You can make a trip around the world while you stay in Washington at the eighth annual international bazaar that opened yesterday in the old Webster Building at Tenth and H streets.

The Americanization School Association has arranged for you to see a part of Poland, Russia, Normandy, Switzerland, China, Turkey, Spain, Italy, Germany and many other countries just by taking a stroll through the rooms where dolls in native costume, dainty needlework, shawls, hand-made jewelry, coverlets, dresses and toys are marked ready for sale to Santa Claus or anybody else who wants to buy.

Plenty of persons were crowding through the doors and making purchases yesterday morning an hour after the bazaar got under way. Customers lingered long to price dolls dressed in the same fashion as the women who stood behind the counters and made the sales. Gayly colored prints and pictures also attracted much favorable attention as Spanish, Swiss and Russian "sales-girls" helped their customers to decide on purchases that will be found on many Christmas trees in Washington week after next.

Individuals Interesting.

Yesterday a number of persons also found out something about the quaintly attired women who waited on them. In some cases customers considered the individual behind the counter much more interesting than anything she had for sale.

Mrs. Emma Schneebeli, in her Swiss peasant costume, fingered her eidelweiss necklace and told all inquirers she had been in Washington since 1922; that she learned to speak English in the Americanization School, and that she is "always homesick for Switzerland at this time of the year."

Frau Gertrude Pfrengle, of Firtwangen, Germany, in her old-fashioned Black Forest peasant dress (it has been in her family 100 years) said she would be going back to her native land next February. Senora Nina Montero, from Panama, in Spanish regalia, and Mme. Marie Tedestrom, from Normandy, in traditional attire of a Norman peasant woman, said she had lived in Washington for ten years and enjoyed nothing more than participating in the annual international bazaar.

Small, dainty Mrs. Frank Fong, from China, said in broken English that her children are regular attendants of the Americanization School and that she frequently attends classes with them in order to learn how to speak "the new tongue."

Wide Choice of Articles.

Every woman and every man taking part in the bazaar has a story to tell of the land from which they came and their experiences in a country where the Americanization School has proved to be one of their greatest aids in getting along in a strange land. For this reason they particularly enjoy participating in the bazaar, which is held annually in order to make money for the association's welfare work, much of which will be used this year to provide Christmas baskets for alien families ineligible for relief from other District agencies.

Miss Maude E. Aiton, principal of the Webster School, said yesterday that the current bazaar offers a much wider choice of articles than have been for sale in former years. She estimated that representatives of 50 nationalities and approximately 1,200 individuals had a part in preparing contributions. The bazaar will continue through today and tonight until 10 p. m.

Steiwer Off for D. C.

Airport Site Board Delays Its Decision

President's Commission Deadlocked After Closed Session.

Indications that Washington's time-worn municipal airport controversy has become even more complicated than before were seen last night after the President's airport commission—appointed last April to select a site—met for several hours behind closed doors, but failed to reach a decision.

Explaining he was bound to secrecy by committee rules, Senator William H. King, of Utah, chairman of the commission, refused to discuss the meeting. He said no report on a definite site will be submitted until after an additional conference scheduled "sometime around December 21."

When the commission was set up nearly eight months ago, sponsors of the movement hoped for an early report. But yesterday's deadlock—and sources close to the commission indicated it was a deadlock—brought renewed speculation on Washington's chances to enjoy a new and model air terminal in the immediate future.

Certain members of the commission are known to favor one site, while others are inclined to locate the flying field elsewhere. Sites under consideration are Gravelly Point, the present Washington-Hoover Field and possibly Hybla Valley, Va.

Hybla Valley, however, has been suggested as a dirigible base for transatlantic flights and is considered too far from the city for practical use as an air travel terminal.

Army engineers already are at work improving and filling in the Gravelly Point site. Objections to this location have been raised, however, in view of aerial activities directly across the river at Bolling Field. Authorities, in many instances, think the military and commercial fields will conflict if the Gravelly Point site is chosen.

In view of the controversy, air experts believe, it is not unlikely the commission will select a location apart from any now known to be under consideration.

In addition to Senator King and Gen. Westover, members of the commission are Senator Royal S. Copeland, of New York; Representatives Mary T. Norton, of New Jersey; Sterling Cole, of New York; Jack Nichols, of Oklahoma; Senator Warren R. Austin, of Vermont; Frederic A. Delano, chairman of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, and Dan Sultan, Engineer Commissioner of the District.

Clubs for Charity.

ONE YEAR AGO, when "The Eternal Road" was announced for production, Max Reinhardt hired Sidney Lumet, 12 years old, for the role of the boy, Isaac. Then the backers retired and production was delayed—until this month. Reinhardt summoned the lad to start rehearsing—and discovered that during the year Sidney had outgrown his role. That's why the boy will be seen as the Son of the Estranged One when the play finally opens . . . The police yesterday used their clubs on the Federal Theater Project demonstrators at 701 Eighth avenue. The Project's actors are scheduled to play three benefits Christmas week—for the police department!

BIG TOWN, the new magazine, was delayed in reaching the newsstands this week. The reason was the ever-late Jimmy Walker, who was three days late in submitting his front-page article.

THE MOVIE-PRODUCERS of "Charlie Chan at the Opera" had difficulties with Warner Oland and Boris Karloff—each of whom battled over getting top-billing. That's why the compromise effected now gives the billing in the ads as "Warner Oland vs. Boris Karloff in "Charlie Chan at the Opera." . . . George Burns and Gracie Allen will have their new Hollywood home finished on Christmas morning. They'll just have time for one meal there—and then leave for New York.

TWO SEC attorneys were barred at the Stork Club door last week . . . Every night club was polled by a newspaper last night on whether the customers thought the King should marry Mrs. Simpson. Only the snooty clubs voted "No" . . . Gypsy Rose Lee attended the Beaux Arts Ball last night—dressed in six new men.

NICHOLAS MURRAY BUTLER visited the Columbia Law School library for the first time in years. Result—his new edict that students can't work there unless they keep their coats on . . .

THE DUTCH ART dealers have a publicity tieup with "Rembrandt." They loaned all the genuine Dutch furniture and antiques used in the film, without charge, in the hope that the movie's success will restore the popularity of Dutch wares. . . . A Herald Tribune executive attending the swanky Beaux Arts Ball for the first time left his wallet, containing $640, with Jack Kriendler of "21," for safekeeping. . . .

THE FEDERAL THEATER has had an operetta in rehearsal since last March. The show is entitled "Fool's Gold." Whenever it was on the verge of opening, something always went wrong—either an actor quit or a director was assigned to another project. Last week it appeared that the show finally was set—when the leading man threw the company out of gear again. He stated that he regretted having to leave, but it was important. A midtown department store wanted him—for a Santa Claus role!

In HOLLYWOOD With Jimmy Fiddler

Real Movie Thrill.

HOLLYWOOD, DEC. 7.

At the Lakeside Round Table a gang of us swapped yarns today about movie thrills that have never reached the screen. Richard Arlen contributed the prize story in this hair-raiser about Janet Ford, a stunt woman.

EDDIE CANTOR

She was contracted to dive a speeding automobile into 10 feet of water, and it was written into the script that she remain under surface as long as humanly possible. Several hundred studio employes and visitors gathered to watch the hazardous scene, as with a splintering of glass and wrenching of twisted steel, Miss Ford dived to the bottom of the pool.

When she was ready to rise, the stunt woman discovered that her long hair had become entangled in the wreckage. She struggled for release, unable to summon aid because she was far below the surface of the murky water. The last bubbles of breath were trickling from her lungs when she plunged both hands into her hair and with a Herculean tug pulled most of it from her scalp by the roots. She floated to the surface unconscious and bleeding.

I ran across Eddie Cantor dusting off the remains of a heavy luncheon in the Twentieth Century-Fox cafe recently. Empty plates fairly surrounded him, and I kidded him about his appetite. "Boy," he exclaimed, hardly interrupting a flank attack on a slab of cheese cake, "I never had food like this at Sam Goldwyn's studio."

Not too long ago, Jean Hersholt dropped in on a picture troupe filming scenes on an Indian reservation near Palm Springs. Jean had been made honorary chief of the Iroquois tribe of New York because of his work in "The Country Doctor," so he decided to pay the California chief a social visit. He introduced himself as Chief Ha-Wa-Noat ("Famous Voice"), and was greeted with cold silence.

The local Indians went into a pow-wow and decided they had been insulted because a Hollywood actor had traveled 3,000 miles to be appointed chief of another tribe. They became so angry that the picture director was forced to ask Hersholt to leave camp. The sulking braves refused to work while he was present.

Transcontinental Tour Is Planned for the Lunts; Will Cohan and Harris Do Another Minstrel Show?

Theater Guild to Send Sherwood's "Idiot's Delight" to West Coast in Face of Capacity Broadway Business; the Old "Cohan and Harris Minstrels" Recalled; Washington Variety Club Holds Its Annual Election of Officers at Quarters in the Willard.

A BULLETIN from our good friend, Howard Herrick, one of the most astute of the theater's veteran publicists, brings word that the Theater Guild is arranging a country-wide tour of Robert Emmett Sherwood's Pulitzer Prize play of "Idiot's Delight," despite the fact that it still is packing the large Shubert Theater in New York at every performance, with Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne in the costellar roles.

BELL.

The Guild and the Lunts are not averse to taking a play on the road even when it still could keep on playing in New York to overflow houses. They feel, jointly, that the theater in America owes something to those unimportant portions of the country which lie outside the restricted boundaries of Manhattan Isle. This season the Lunts feel the urge to extend their travels and play the longest route they ever have undertaken.

While the itinerary of the junket has not yet been definitely determined, it seems likely, according to Mr. Herrick, that the tour will include Boston, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Rochester, Buffalo, Detroit, Toledo, Indianapolis, Dayton, Columbus, Cincinnati, Chicago, Minneapolic, St. Paul, Madison, Wis.; Milwaukee, Des Moines, Omaha, Kansas City, St. Louis, Toronto, Denver, Salt Lake City, Los Angeles and San Francisco.

One suspects that Washington is omitted from this comprehensive transcontinental trip by reason of the fact that it was accorded the metropolitan premiere of the play, at the National Theater last season, before it went to New York to achieve first honors at the hands of the Pulitzer prize committee.

In celebrating the reunion of George M. Cohan and Sam H. Harris as a theatrical producing firm pictorially in yesterday's issue of this perspicacious palladium, something should have been said about one of the most important incidents of their former association and a hope expressed that they might at some time in the future repeat that diverting gesture.

I have in mind the production of "The Cohan and Harris Minstrels," a blackface enterprise that threw a tremendous scare into Lew Dockstader, George Primrose and all the other then practitioners of an almost forgotten branch of activity in the American amusement scene. George "Honeyboy" Evans—who later bought the rights of the show—was on one end, the late James J. Corbett, former heavyweight champion of the world, was interlocutor and Julian Eltinge, greatest of the female impersonators, played the "wench" roles in the forepart and afterpiece, in addition to doing his amazing specialty in the "olio."

Another specialty team was the musical combination of the Waterbury Brothers and Tenny. Mrs. Waterbury, mother of the boys, formerly conducted a theatrical boarding house on about the site now occupied by the entrance to the Warner Brothers' Earle Theater, when the block on Thirteenth street, between E and F, was built up with a row of three-story red brick houses.

It was into this minstrel frolic that Raymond Hitchcock, slightly down on his luck, both socially and financially, was drafted when "Honeyboy" Evans succumbed to an appendectomy. Hitchcock was supposed to be a tough "nigger" from Memphis and Jim Corbett accosted him with that fact: "So you are a tough guy who comes from Memphis, eh?" "Well," replied one of the best whiteface, and worst blackface comedians that ever lived, "I was born in Memphis, but I come from musical comedy!"

At yesterday's annual election of officers and members of the board of governors of the Variety Club of Washington, Tent No. 11, in the national organization, Divisional Manager Carter Tate Barron, of Loew's, Inc., was named to the post of chief barker (president), with A. Julian Brylawski, head of the Warner Brothers' real estate department, first assistant chief barker; A. E. Lichtman, of the theater chain bearing his name, second assistant chief barker; that high-strung Southern gentleman, Sam A. Galanty, division manager for Columbia Pictures in the Washington territory, wagonman (treasurer), and Harry Hunter, Washington branch exchange manager for Paramount, propertyman (secretary).

Five vacancies on the board of governors were filled by the re-election of J. Louis Rome, Baltimore exhibitor and past chief barker of the club, and Harry Hunter, of Paramount, and the election as new governors of A. E. Lichtman, Sidney B. Lust, independent local film exhibitor and exchange manager, and Charles Kranz, Washington branch exchange manager for United Artists.

Installation of the newly elected officers will be celebrated at one of Variety's midwinter routs on Monday, January 4, 1937—a date no doubt arbitrarily chosen so that the drama desks, who have to cover the National on that evening, will not be able to be present! Discreet fellers, these Variety lads.

Before nominating our "ten best pictures of the year," in the Film Daily annual poll of the critics, it is interesting to note that Harry Leo Hurowitz, of 805 Quintana place, has chosen these as his "ten best" of the year, in the order of their recitation: "The Story of Louis Pasteur," "Mutiny on the Bounty," "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town," "The Tale of Two Cities," "Anthony Adverse," "Show Boat," "Green Pastures," "Nine Days a Queen," "Follow the Fleet" and "Dodsworth."

Today at 1:30 o'clock, the Loew executives, egged on, no doubt, by Master Ray Bell—no relation—are screening "Banjo on My Knee," for the edification of the drama desks. This is the item costarring Barbara Stanwyck and Joel McCrea, with the Hall Johnson Choir furnishing musical background, etcetera. It is a Twentieth Century-Fox production with a provocative sort of title in that "Banjo on My Knee" business.

Stars in New Revue at the National

Remembered for the high temperatures she achieved in "At Home Abroad," at the National last season, in company with the late Herb Williams, Ethel Waters, now at Loew's Capitol, and others of equal note, Beatrice Lillie now returns to the same stage with Bert Lahr and a distinguished cast of singers, dancers and comedians in "The Show Is On," headed for the New York Winter Garden. The lilting and ludicrous Lillie scored tremendously with last night's capacity audience, as did Mr. Lahr and all the others.

Mrs. Kelton Buried In Arlington Rites

Funeral services for Mrs. Alan Cunningham Kelton, sister of the later Rear Admiral Albert Dillingham, were held yesterday in Arlington National Cemetery, with the Rev. John C. Palmer officiating.

Mrs. Kelton, who was 87, died last Wednesday in Bristol, N. H. She was the wife of the late Col. Alan Cunningham Kelton, U. S. M. C., and a sister-in-law of the late Brig. Gen. John C. Kelton, whose wife, Mrs. J. C. Kelton, lives in Washington.

Oldest Human Skull Discovered in China

Peiping, China, Dec. 7 (AP).—American scientists reported today the discovery of a prehistoric human skull which they said unquestionably shows that the ancient "Peking man" was the earliest known human.

Dr. Franz Weidenreich, director of the Rockefeller endowed Caenozoic Research Laboratory, said the find was made by the Chinese scientist, C. L. Chia. Dr. Weidenrich said the skull appeared to be 500,000 years old.

'Show Is On' Is Smash Hit Opening Night

By Nelson B. Bell.

"THE SHOW IS ON." The Messrs. Shubert present Beatrice Lillie and Bert Lahr in vincent Minnelli's new musical in two acts and 26 scenes, with Reginald Gardiner, Mitzi Mayfair, Paul Haakon, Gracie Barrie, Charles Walters, Vera Allen, John McCauley, Evelyn Thaw, Ralph Riggs, Marie Carroll and Roy Campbell's Continentals. Entire production conceived, designed and staged by Vincent Minelli. Music and lyrics mostly by Vernon Duke and Ted Fetter, with additional numbers by Carmichael & Adams, Dietz & Schwartz, George and Ira Gershwin, Harbera & Arlen, Herman Hupfeld, Irwin & Zeno and Rogers & Hart. Dances staged by Robert Alton; sketches mostly by David Freeman and Moss Hart, directed by Edward Clark Lilley; "Casanova" and "Tragedians" ballets, by Harry Losee. Orchestra conducted by Gordon Jenkins. At the National Theater.

Like the French railroad locomotive in Reginald Gardiner's delightful monologue that comes down near the end of the last act, Vincent Minelli's production for the Messrs. Shubert of "The Show Is On" has 115 of everything in it—songs, dances, ballets, sketches, chorus novelties, burlesques, and so forth and whatnot, in an unending procession of colorful and tuneful gayety that did not permit a final curtain in the National Theater last night until almost midnight.

This was a superabundance of diversion that seemed vastly to please the capacity crowd in attendance, hungry for the ribaldries, the spectacular effects, the accomplished contributions by principals and the gyrations of the beautiful girls of the first big, new, musical gaucherie of the season. There can be no question of this revue's being a success on Broadway, when it reaches New York a fortnight or so hence. The only problem confronting the producers is to decide judiciously what and where to prune.

Lillie and Lahr Lay 'Em Low!

Certainly nothing can be taken away from Beatrice Lillie and Bert Lahr, the co-stars, with impunity. They have some very elegant material that they deliver across the footlights with complete command of audience risibilities, deftness and assurance. Last night an unprogramed sketch—a travesty on "Tovarich" and a Gracie Barrie song, "As Long as You've Got Your Health," were introduced, I think, for the first time.

Some of her most vivacious buffoonery Miss Lillie literally delivers to the audience in person, swinging out precariously over the orchestra chairs, riding on a crescent moon, and tossing garters to the pewholders below. This harks back, perhaps a little nebulously, to the sort of thing that Lillian Lorraine used to do in a remote edition of two of the Ziegfeld "Follies."

Matching this unique number of Miss Lillie's in point of immediate and overwhelming crowd reaction, is Bert Lahr's priceless "Song of the Woodman," by E. Y. Harburg and Harold Arlen, the last named remembered for his "Stormy Weather" still being sung by Ethel Waters at the Capitol.

Gracie Does Yeowoman's Service.

Then there are the songs which Gracie Barrie, a Washington favorite, introduces to the number of half a dozen or so. I liked best her "As Long as You've Got Your Health," "The Show Is On"—rather the theme number of the two acts—"Casanova," introductory to a ballet danced by Paul Haakon and ensemble, and "By Strauss," the closing number of the first act.

Charming little Mitzi Mayfair, with Charles Walters as a dancing partner, executes a considerable succession of her most graceful Terpsichorean creations and Paul Haakon, of course, is in a class by himself in the field of the classic dance.

The "Tragedian" number seemed to me a trifle long drawn out and of none too original conception, but, like everything else on the program, it was applauded to the echo by an audience wholly carried away by its own enthusiasm.

Skits Pack Punch.

Among the sketches, "Tatania," a timely travesty on the King Edward-Mrs. Wallis Simpson impasse, played by Bert Lahr, as a movie hero commissioned to win Tatania away from the monarch, and Vera Allen, as the woman in the case; "Mr. Gielgud Passes By," counterpointing the Gielgud and Leslie Howard "Hamlets;" "Box Office," a Beatrice Lillie slap at the "Theater Geeld;" "The Reading of the Play," in which a French actress doesn't like her role, "Burlesque," and "Taxes, Taxes," with Bert Lahr and Reginald Gardiner, struck me as being cleverest and best. It seems Mr. Lahr was entirely futile in "Tatania," because the King had signed with M. G. M.!

There is so much crammed into the two acts and 26 or more scenes of this production that it is impossible to do more than touch upon the more prominent features of a bill rich in entertainment in the brief few minutes of a hurried midnight resume.

In color effects and striking stage pictures, "The Show Is On" will hold its own with the best of recent revues. It has a wealth of beauty in the ensemble, costumes that are sometimes daring and always beautiful, and a snap and dash that even a few mechanical difficulties, incident to a first performance of so heavy a production, could not mar last night.

Orchestra Comes Through.

The orchestra gave a spirited performance under the energetic baton of Gordon Jenkins and altogether a remarkably ebullient evening in the theater was enjoyed by a distinguished overflow crowd obviously out to laugh its collective head off—which it practically did.

If in the rush of a late hour and an early deadline any aspect of this hilarious business has been slighted, or any name omitted, possibly the small-type paragraph preceding these remarks will be helpful.

Yankees Batter Shamrocks to Take Game, 20 to 13

Newsom Bait, Nats Seeking Batterymen

By Shirley Povich.
Sports Editor of The Post.

New York, Dec. 7.—Trade winds whistled through the lobbies of baseball headquarters throughout the day, but nightfall found big league managers and magnates with only a hoarseness to show for their efforts.

Not a single deal had been swung, but out of the maelstrom of rumors and reports crystallized a half dozen concrete developments that had foundation in fact.

1. The Washington club is offering Pitcher Buck Newsom, hitherto considered a fixture with the Nats, in a trade involving another pitcher and a catcher.

2. Manager Rogers Hornsby of the Browns has under consideration a deal that would bring Outfielder Joe Vosmik and Catcher Frankie Pytlak from the Indians in an exchange for Outfielder Julius Solters and Catcher Rollie Hemsley.

Browns Would Trade.

3. The Chicago White Sox have offered the Browns Pitcher Johnny Whitehead in exchange for Third Baseman Harlan Clift and Pitcher Jack Knott.

4. Manager Connie Mack is cooling toward a deal that would have sent Third Baseman Frankie Higgins to the Red Sox in exchange for Third Baseman Bill Werber and Second Baseman Oscar Melillo.

5. The Tigers are attempting to peddle Outfielders Pete Fox, Goose Goslin and Al Simmons in a deal that would bring them pitching and infield talent.

6. The Pittsburgh Pirates have taken precedence over the Cincinnati Reds in the bidding for Dizzy Dean and may land him from the Cardinals before the present trading session is over.

No less than frantic in their attempts to acquire a catcher and a pitcher to bolster the Nats, Owner Clark Griffith and Manager Bucky Harris are dangling Newsom as a lure in their supreme effort to strengthen the team.

Tigers Interested.

The Tigers displayed an interest in Newsom when they offered Outfielder Pete Fox and Pitcher Elden Auker in exchange, but Harris and Griffith, who rejected that trade, are insisting on both a pitcher and a catcher for Newsom, or two pitchers.

It is in the direction of Boston that the Nats' bosses are more hopeful of swinging a Newsom trade. The big pitcher has been a favorite in the Hub and Manager Joe Cronin is ready to part with Catcher Rick Ferrell. If he would include one of his younger pitchers, the deal would probably be made.

But the chief hopes of Griffith and Harris center on the probability that deals now under consideration by other clubs will fall through and that trade talk with the Nats will be easier.

Griffith and Harris will make serious bids for both Frankie Pytlak and Rollie Hemsley, if neither of these are peddled to other clubs in trades now supposedly red hot.

It was the apathy of other magnates toward the Nats' scant trading material that forced Griffith to put Newsome on the block. The offer of Cliff Bolton and Outfielders Carl Reynolds, Fred Sington and Jesse Hill brought no serious listeners.

Werber Deal Off.

The Nats' bosses have not entered the lists in competition for the services of Chicago's Johnny Whitehead, despite his impressive pitching record. Whitehead's habit of wandering off the reservation is the reason.

Boston Club's Late Rally Is Futile

2,500 Cold Fans See Clash; Gotham Club Never Headed.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Washington had its first taste of American League professional football last night at Griffith Stadium, and about 2,500 of the faithful came out to sample it, braving the frigid weather to see the New York Yankees triumph over the Boston Shamrocks, 20-13.

If all pro games are as thrilling and enjoyable as this one, either the American or National Leagues will find a warm welcome here. Pro football, the brand they served up last night, would go big with Washington fans. There wasn't a dull moment in the entire game.

There were times, though, when it looked as if the boys might be taking turns entertaining the fans, but it is hard to criticize two teams playing on a frozen turf as hard as a billiard table.

Benny Friedman, one of Michigan's immortals; Ken Strong, hero of innumerable New York University battles; Don Elser, Notre Dame; Red Fleming, a graduate of Catholic University; Hank Soar, of Providence, were among the outstanding men on the field. Friedman, however, stole the spotlight, bringing the crowd to its feet time and again by his spectacular ball-carrying and passing. Doug Wycoff, formerly of Georgia Tech, gave one of the greatest exhibitions of line-plunging the old town has ever seen—if the Shamrocks really were trying.

Boston opened up with an aerial offensive after Zapustas recovered a fumble on the Yankees' 38-yard line, but failed to gain after reaching the 16-yard line Zapustas attempted a placement kick, but it was blocked. Davis recovered for the Yankees on their own 17.

The Yankees' first scoring drive started from midfield following an exchange of punts. Newman went through the middle for a first down and followed up with a pass to Jim Mooney for another first down on Boston's 39-yard line.

A double reverse ending in an end-around play, Mooney carrying, gave the Yankees another first down on the 17. Two line plays failed to gain before Ken Strong slipped through right tackle, reversed his field and went over for a touchdown. Strong also added the extra point with a placement.

The Yankees, showing a powerful running game, featuring Newman around the ends, and Wycoff through the line, completely dominated the game throughout the remainder of the first half.

On the ensuing kick-off, Soar, behind perfect interference, ran 90 yards down the middle of the field for Boston's first touchdown.

It was not long after this that the Shamrocks scored again, Fleming arranging the trappings by recovering a blocked punt on the 13-yard line. Soar passed to Uzdavinis for the touchdown. Hinkle added the extra point with a place-kick.

The remainder of the battle was a futile struggle for points fought between the 30-yard lines.

Wilson Loses On Decision To Jones

Jimmy Jones, Baltimore, won a unanimous eight-round decision from Bobby Wilson, pink-thatched Floridian, in a rough, but unpleasing-to-watch, main event at Turner's Arena last night.

Tommy Beck, Jacksonville, middleweight, upset a highly favored Ben Brown, of Atlanta, in an eight-round feature.

Brown floored Beck for a nine count in the first round, but the Jacksonville swat artist picked himself up, dusted himself off and started all over again to win an unanimous decision.

Lou Gevinson, former amateur welterweight champion of the District, knocked out one Benny Wittler, a substitute from Baltimore, in 2 minutes 30 seconds of the first round of a six-round scheduled fight.

Substituting against the Jewish southpaw after two had run out on Gevinson, the lanky Wittler scarcely raised a hand in self-defense. Gevinson swept Wittler to the floor with a right, with a left, and Wittler went down once without being hit as he was being built up for a knockout.

The final punch was a straight left to the head. Wittler eased himself to the floor, straightened himself out and slept through the ten count.

In another six-round preliminary Sam Bracala won a split decision from Stanford Carrier. Bracala was down in the third round but he outgamed the Washington welterweight in a Garrison finish.

Yale vs. Michigan.

New Haven, Conn., Dec. 7 (AP).—The University of Michigan, after a lapse of 55 years, will appear on Yale's football schedule in 1938, the university announced tonight. The schedule for two years hence includes seven other games against Columbia, Pennsylvania, Navy, Dartmouth, Brown, Princeton and Harvard.

Lou Gevinson Impresses Reilly

Pete Reilly, the "Silver Fox of Fistiana," who last spring offered to buy the contract of Lou Gevinson, sight unseen, saw the former District amateur featherweight champion in the flesh for the first time at Turner's Arena last night.

"Gevinson shapes up like a good prospect," said Reilly, after watching Gevinson score a quick knockout over one Benny Whittler, who offered very little, if any resistance. "Of course, it is hard to get a line on a prospect when he has no more opposition than that fellow gave him, but from what I saw, Gevinson has natural ability."

During the course of Gevinson's fight, Reilly amused those with whom he was sitting by calling Lou's shots before the former amateur let them go. Twice he predicted to the split second when Gevinson was going to let his left go, and callied the landing place of each punch accurately.

Reilly, who generally is considered the shrewdest manager in the fight game, has had a controlling interest in many outstanding fighters in every division. His principal interest always has been in the featherweight division, which he controlled for many years. He manages Freddie Miller, who lost his 25-pound championship to Pete Sarron at Griffith Stadium last summer.

System Rates Minnesota No. 1 Team

By the Associated Press.

Champaign, Ill., Dec. 7.—Minnesota's mighty eleven was ranked today as the Nation's most powerful college football team by Prof. Frank G. Dickinson, of the University of Illinois, originator of the rating system bearing his name.

Although the Golden Gophers were defeated by Northwestern, Prof. Dickinson's figures gave them a rating of 23.77 points for a margin of more than a point over Louisiana State University's undefeated, once-tied eleven. The Tigers of the South were rated at 22.59, an edge of less than a point over Pittsburgh's Rose Bowl nominee which gained 22.28 points.

Prof. Dickinson explained that Minnesota's intersectional triumphs over Washington, Pitt's Rose Bowl foe, and Nebraska, were more than sufficient to offset the defeat by Northwestern. Louisiana State's cause suffered through a 6-6 tie with the University of Texas, a second-division team in the Southwest Conference which was overwhelmed by Minnesota.

Minnesota gained top ranking for the second time since Prof. Dickin-

Texan Moved Grass, Say Rival Pros

Horton Smith Annexes 2d Money, 2 Strokes Behind Leader.

By the Associated Press.

Coral Gables, Fla., Dec. 7.—Rugged Ralph Guldahl, Texas-born professional, walked off with the $2,500 top check in the $10,000 Miami Biltmore Golf Open today.

Leading at the end of 54 holes, he opened the gate wide with his first over-par round of the four-day tournament. Nobody else walked in and Guldahl won with a 283 total.

Horton Smith came closest. The tow-headed Chicagoan, who set the tournament record last year when he won with 281, collected the $1,250 second prize with 285, shooting a par 71 on the final 18 holes. He had led the field with 68 and 69 the first two days, but cracked up on a windy Sunday with 77.

Sarazen Ties for Third.

The veteran Gene Sarazen, of New York, and Harold (Jug) McSpaden, of Winchester, Mass., tied, one stroke back of Smith and split third and fourth money totaling $1,750. Sarazen, in a threesome with Smith and Jimmy Demaret, could have tied the Chicagoan had he not ben too heavy with a chip shot on the back nine.

Guldahl shot a 74 today and the tournament committee penalized him two more strokes on a protest by his playing mates, W. Lawson Little, of San Francisco, and Denny Shute, of the home course, that he parted the grass over his ball in a hazard. That made his total 283.

Guldahl also incurred penalties in the Augusta open. Guldahl won the $1,000 first prize there, however.

As it turned out, the two strokes made no difference in the result, but the penalty kept Guldahl from tying Smith's tournament record.

Pressure Tells.

Guldahl needed only a par round when he went out this morning to sew up the money, but the pressure plainly told on him. He was in a threesome with Little and Shute and their sub-par shooting put the pressure directly on him.

They both birdied the first hole while Guldahl took par 5. His drive stopped behind a bunker and he played an iron to be safe on his second shot, but landed in a trap short and to the right of the green. Little's second shot stopped a few feet from the pin and he might have had an eagle, but his putt rimmed the cup.

Guldahl's break really started on the fifth hole, a sharp dogleg to the right. His drive bounded into the trunk of a cabbage palm out of bounds a few feet from the fairway. If it had not lodged in the fronds it surely would have rolled fair.

That cost him a stroke, but he put his third in a trap, chipped poorly and required two putts for a six.

Seventh Disputed Hole.

On the next hole both Guldahl and Little muffed short putts and took bogey fives.

The seventh was the disputed hole. It is a dogleg to the left. Little played safe with an iron off the tee, but Guldahl used a wood and his shot landed on the near bank of a creek.

It was a mean downhill lie in long grass, but Guldahl came out nicely with a niblick, 20 yards short of the green. His chip shot was off to the left, and he holed out in another bogey five.

They finished the out nine in pars, and Little, in second place after 54 holes, had whittled away five of

Horse Doping Charged To Charles Town Trio

Boxer Charged With Doping Activity

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Dec. 7.—Federal narcotic agents and local police rounded up four men today on suspicion of being either members or associates of a gang of narcotic peddlers operating here since the opening of the fall racing season.

Two men, docketed at the police station as George Corrigan, 29, of New York, and Arthur de Vitae, 25, of Brooklyn, N. Y., were taken into custody late last night by agents and police with drawn guns at a downtown intersection.

Later a man who identified himself as Charles McAvoy, 24, of New York, was apprehended at a nearby intersection. Jack Russell, 42, of Charles Town, W. Va., was arrested as he stepped off a train early this morning.

Police said McAvoy, a heavyweight boxer, was scheduled to appear in a ring contest in Richmond, Va., tonight. They identified him as a former sparring partner of both Max Schmeling and Joe Lewis, contenders for the heavyweight crown.

Following the questioning of McAvoy, investigators went to a restaurant and took charge of a valise in which they said was found 25 ounces of a narcotic. Police said 2¼ ounces of the same narcotic were found on Russell.

Boyd Martin, Maryland supervisor of the Federal narcotic division, said the roundup had been planned and directed by H. G. Anslinger, Federal commissioner of narcotics at Washington, and his assistant, M. L. Harney. Two agents and five Baltimore detectives aided him in making the arrests.

Stewards Ban 2 Trainers, Ex-Jockey; Morphine Given 2 Winners.

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

Charles Town Race Track, Dec. 7. Two trainers were suspended and a former jockey has been denied admission to this track as the result of doping charges, involving two horses which won here last week. J. Wilson, colored, and F. Shenski were the two horsemen to draw suspensions, while W. A. McNair, former steeplechase rider, was ordered ejected from the grounds.

The horses which were alleged to have been stimulated with morphine when they scored galloping victories are Mrs. K. Basehore's Flower Time, victor in two starts here, and N. D'Orsaneo's Wittekind. All horses trained by the two men will be barred for the remainder of the meeting.

McNair was given chief blame for the condition of the horse trained by Wilson. The stewards recommended that McNair be barred from the ground here for a year.

The three rulings issued by the stewards follow:

"J. Wilson, colored, trainer, suspended for the remainder of the meeting and it is recommended to the West Virginia Racing Commission that his suspension be continued for 60 days, his name appearing on the registration as trainer, but from evidence in the case, we are of the opinion W. A. McNair was more responsible for the condition of the horses than Wilson. The report from the Government chemist on the horse Wittekind showed positive (morphine). Wittekind is barred from starting for the remainder of the meeting, and it is recommended to the West Virginia Racing Commission that the disbarment be continued for one year. All horses trained by J. Wilson are barred for one year. All horses trained by J. Wilson are barred for the remainder of the meeting—Running Water,

Morris Slated for Sullivan Award

Colorado Boy Is Best Bet Due to Owens' A. A. U. Trouble

By Alan Gould.
Associated Press Sports Editor.

Houston, Tex., Dec. 7.—Best bet for the 1936 Sullivan Memorial Trophy as year's outstanding amateur athlete—Glenn Morris, the Colorado boy who taught himself how to smash world records in the decathlon and topped the Olympic iron men . . . Jesse Owens, though still very much in the running for the award, has had the "finger" put on him by the A. A. U. . . . Jesse didn't distinguish himself, say the athletic master minds, by his professional backflip, but they can't take those gold medals away from the Buckeye Bullet the way they did Jim Thorpe's after the 1912 Olympics.

Eleanor Holm Jarrett, who undoubtedly gave a long-range cheer after hearing about the downfall of Avery Brundage's forces in the A. A. U. convention, may stir up trouble for the Metropolitan Association by demanding a showdown on her amateur status . . . Eleanor's name never reached the convention floor, nor did any of the other Olympic "cases" emerge for discussion in the official proceedings, but the delegates waged many a post-Olympic battle while relaxing between sessions.

The A. A. U. sidestepped trouble over the rivalry between newspapers promoting amateur boxing by referring the subject to a committee for "further study." . . . The situation concerns sponsors of golden gloves contests, particularly in Omaha and Milwaukee. . . . The A. A. U. voted to take a 5 per cent "cut" of future "gates" for international amateur boxing competitions, instead of the customary 10 per cent, as a step toward relieving the promotion strain. . . .

The Brundage-Walsh forces, which lost out to Jerry Mahoney in the A. A. U. election, attempted a "grand coup" by getting the election under way at the unfashionable hour of 8 a. m. Sunday... The Mahoney forces came a-running after the whistle was blown, some of them still in their dinner clothes, and quickly won an agreement to postpone the election until 10:30 . . . Pat Walsh took his defeat so much to heart that he didn't even stay for the finish of the battle-royal but Avery Brundage, the retiring prexy and target of Olympic opposition, stuck it out to the last speech. . . The Olympic chief proved he can "take it." . . .

Sammy Baugh, greatest forward passer in Southwest football history, received the Houston Post's annual award tonight as the "most valuable player" in the Southwest Conference . . . Sammy won the huge trophy by getting a perfect score of 49 points in the ballot among seven sports editors, one for each conference club . . . Experts rate Douglas Locke, 147-pound backfield star of St. Mary's University as one of the finest all-around ball handlers in Texas . . .

"W. A. McNair, denied all privileges of the Charles Town Jockey Club, and it is recommended to the West Virginia Racing Commission that he be ruled off for practices detrimental to the best interest of racing.

"F. Shenski, trainer, is suspended for the remainder of the meeting and denied all privileges of the track. The saliva test of Flower Time reported by the Government chemist showed positive (morphine). It is recommended to the West Virginia Racing Commission that the suspension of F. Shenski be continued for at least one year; also the disbarment of Flower Time be continued for same period. Ardor and Ado, trained by F. Shenski, are suspended for the remainder of the meeting by the order of the stewards."

Silver Arch Wins.

The Press Purse, the day's feature race, proved a hop, skip and a few jumps for O. S. Bloom's Silver Arch. Jockey Johnny Shanks had the mount on the Archaic gelding and he gave him no time to loaf, hustling him to the front in the first furlong and then keeping him there. Roy Boy had trouble at the start and gained steadily throughout the running, but never menaced the winner. Round Bend, which, with Whiskora, had much the best of one of the few poor starts here, was third. The winner was the favorite at a $5.60 mutuel.

The race was run before a crowd of some 3,500 and over a muddy track. Those customers who teamed Teddys Squaw with Dixie Bee in the daily double collected $46.80.

Miss Catalan, ridden by Jockey F. Cusimano, of Washington, D. C., scored a nose victory over Jimmy D. in the sixth race to pay a $17.20 mutuel. The 8-year-old mare withstood a long whipping drive to take the decision in the final jump. Third money went to Sea Finn.

Palumbo Wins Thrice.

Sammy Palumbo won the seventh race with Irish Vote. It made his third winner of the day, with a mutuel of $4.

J. B. J. Townsend's Shanteb, a daughter of the mud loving Flying Ebony, defeated a field of eight juveniles over the four and a half furlong couse in the opening race. Ridden by Palumbo, Shanteb came off the pace of Crushed Ice to take command in the late stretch. Addis Ababa closed well to be second a head of tiring Crushed Ice. The winner was second choice at a $8.60 mutuel.

Teddy's Squaw owned by Mrs. K. N. Gilpin won the second race by a neck-margin from Witless with Yardstick third. Jockey L. Machado took the daughter of Teddy to the front in the opening sixteenth and then whipped her to the wire ahead of the determined bid of Witless. Yardstick went into the air at the break and made up a world of ground to be third. Witless lost Jockey W. Snyder after the finish and the boy escaped with a mud bath. The winner paid $12.80.

Dixie Bee Pays $7.80.

Palumbo rode his second winner of the day in the third race, booting home Dixie Bee, the third horse of the fair sex to score on the program. The Carlaris mare was close to Eastern Herald from the start and took command when that one faltered in the stretch. Old Dominion closed well to be second ahead of Eastern Herald. Dixie Bee paid $7.80 mutuel.

Douglas F., a veteran with a liking for a soft track, bounded to an easy victory in the fourth race.

HOGARTY	(Wimmer)	115	8	8	7^{4}	6^{nk}	8	8	6.20

Two-dollar mutuels paid—DIXIE BEE, $7.80, $3.60, $2.80; OLD DOMINION, $9.80, $4.20; EASTER HERALD, $3.20.

DIXIE BEE, rated along while closest to the pace of EASTER HERALD, rallied when placed to a drive leaving the backstretch, gained ground gradually to take command midway of the stretch and was drawing out at the finish. OLD DOMINION closed resolutely, but could not menace the winner. EASTER HERALD went to the front at once, saved ground, but faltered gradually after reaching the strecth. GAGNE closed some ground in the late stages. TIME WINNER was squeezed back along the rail soon after the start. SUNNY SUSAN tired. ANJOE was away very slowly and can do much better.

DAILY DOUBLE PAID $46.80.

FOURTH RACE—The Charles Town course. Purse, $400; claiming. The Tucker. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won handily; place easily. Went to post at 3:00. Off at 3:01½. Two-dollar mutuels paid—DOUGLTS F., $7.40, $4.80, $3.60; GRACE BUNTING, $5.40, $3.60; TELLIT, $4.20.

DOUGLAS F., much the best, stepped to the front leaving the gate, shook off TELL IT while in hand, drew out and easily held GRACE BUNTING safe in the closing stages. The latter came up with good speed along the backstretch, was hard ridden to the end, but could not menace the winner. TELL IT went forwardly throughout and tired in the final sixteenth. BERRY PATCH closed some ground. MINT BUD failed to recover after being bumped wide by TELL IT at the first turn. ROYAL VEIL was never a factor.

FIFTH RACE—Six and a half furlongs. Purse, $500; allowances. The United Press. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start poor from stall gates. Won easily; place same. Went to post at 3:27½. Off at 3:29. Two-dollar mutuels paid—SILVER ARCH, $5.60, $4.20, $3.20; ROY BOY, $13.20, $6.20; ROUND BEND, $4.00.

SILVER ARCH, hard ridden to take command on the swing for the backstretch, went out to a long lead approaching the stretch and had to be hard driven through the stretch. ROY BOY, troubled at the break, gained gradually throughout and closed willingly. ROUND BEND, shuffled back at the start, gained in the closing stages. WHISKORA beat the gate, but was through early.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $400; claiming. The Braxton. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:57½. Off at 3:58. Winner, Leith Brothers' b. m. (8), by Catalan—Medler. Trained by A. L. Leith. Value to winner, $300; second, $50; third, $30; fourth, $10. Time, 1:59 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MISS CATALAN, $17.20, $7.20, $3.40; JIMMY D., $5.80, $3.60; SEA FINN, $2.80.

MISS CATALAN, well handled, worked her way upon the outside, along the backstretch, rallied when placed to severe pressure and was up in the concluding strides. JIMMY D. took command nearing the far turn with a bold rush, opened a good lead, but Faust did not appear to do his mount justice at the end. SEA FINN was hard used running with VENNIE H. and tired. JIM BROWN gained in the closing half. VENNIE H. stopped. SNOW COAT had early speed.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $500; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won easily; place same. Went to post at 4:26. Off at 4:26½. Winner, A. IRISH VOTE, reserved off the pace to the backstretch, took command when called upon and easily held sway to the finish. JOBAKHETA was hard ridden throughout, but could not cope with the winner. JACK LOW closed willingly. CLEAN SPORT went into the air at the break, was hard handled to take the lead and tired. MINNA and BEAU BAY were always outrun.

Charles Town, Race Track, W. Va., December 7.

Dear Al:

I'm carrying too much weight now. Every where I went yesterday, the Benningites were tossing dimes at me. However, I would rather have you folks mail them in. In case you missed yesterday's column, here's the low down. The Post is conducting its usual Christmas toy fund to supply joy for children who otherwise might miss a visit from Santa. The number of race fans in this part of the country is not known but I contend they are a large part of the population.

I also have maintained that the fans want a track right here in the District. In order to go on record for racing here as well as to aid the good cause. I've asked the Benningites and other turf enthusiasts to put a dime in a piece of paper and mail it to "The Bill Bennings Poll," each dime to be a vote for District racing. I know that every race fan has a dime but some folks say that they are too busy to mail it. I'm depending on them. No names will be used but I intend to acknowledge each dime. Of course, large donations are being received by The Post. However, a dime is the limit in the poll but I want unlimited dimes.

Bill.

First race—White Sweets is the same formidable filly that won here last week. She carries 118 pounds, but needs only to get a starting stall to take this purse. Margaret Nadi will like the track and is dangerous. Off and On to lead the others to the wire.

Second race—Sun Sweep, fouled out of first money in that last outing, appears headed for a set of brackets, barring mishaps. Roquepine ran with the best here last summer and may be a surprise package. Darling Pat and Peace Token are possibilities.

Third race—Mary Wales appears best of this bad lot. She breaks off the rail and may make every post a winning one. Taconite and Occoquan for the place and show. This is a good race to watch.

Fourth race—Justa Play, a winner last week, is first on the also eligible list and will be hard to beat if sent postward. Bromide is speedy and a keen faotor in any field. Sandbroom had a rough trip last out.

Fifth race—Bubbling Spring went to the outside fence here last Friday and was third.. With better handling, this one may take the measure of Enthusiasm. The latter is fit. Take Off for the show award.

Sixth race — Jim Moss sprinted last out in preparation for a distance event. Seems well placed here and I'm going to string along. Cantie is a fair one and could surprise. Never Idol wants more distance.

Seventh race — Hoursend needs only to get into action to make it three straight. Poppyman and Luculent, others on the also eligible list, would be keen factors if they start. Huppy and Brown Wren are best of the others.

Eighth race — If this substitute event is used, I'll take Star Companion, Sakuntala and Shindig.

'37 Preakness Is Raised to $50,000

Pimlico Matches Derby in Prize; Vanderbilt Elected; Daiger to Remain.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Baltimore, Md., Dec. 7.—The 1937 Preakness, to be run at Pimlico, will carry an added money value of $50,000, it was announced today at a meeting of the directors of the Maryland Jockey Club.

Increase in the value of the Preakness from $25,000 to $50,000 brings the historic race on the same level financially with the Kentucky Derby, which was raised from $40,000 to $50,000 for the coming year.

Other highlights of the meeting were: Alfred Gynne Vanderbilt was elected vice president, succeeding Robert J. Walden, resigned.

McLane Is Re-elected.

Charles E. McLane was re-elected president, and Howard S. Thompson, assistant treasurer.

An executive committee was appointed to handle details pertaining to the operation of Pimlico for the 1937 season. Members of this committee are McLane, Vanderbilt, Reeves and Lawreson Riggs.

The committee announced the increase in the value of the Preakness and Daiger said the race probably would be run on Saturday, May 15. However, he qualified that prediction by saying that Pimlico's dates would depend, first, on the meeting of the State's operators to select times for their meetings, and second, on approval of such dates by the Maryland Racing Commission.

It was announced also that the Dixie Handicap would again carry $10,000 added money value; that the Nursery Stakes would remain a $2,500 added event, but that the Baltimore Spring Handicap would be increased from $2,500 to $5,000.

Minimum purse at Pimlico in the spring will be $1,000 and on each day that no stake is offered, there will be a purse of $1,200 for the feature.

Action of the Jockey Club board in re-electing Daiger as secretary and general manager put at rest the many rumors which arose when Daiger sold a block of stock to Vanderbilt early in the fall. These rumors had Daiger resigning; had the board asking for his resignation; had him going to another track in the same capacity, but Matt remains on the job, anticipating one of Pimlico's best seasons.

Jockey on Second Winner in 3 Rides

Fair Grounds, Dec. 7 (AP).—Apprentice Ralph Eccard, who rode the first winner of his career several days ago when under colors the second time in his life, piloted D. L. Ogle's Patchpocket to a stirring victory in the Bunkie Purse, six furlong dash that topped this afternoon's program at the Fair Grounds.

Getting Patchpocket away well, Eccard kept him right in the thick of the fight with Morning Mail and Watercure and riding him hard through the stretch got the upperhand of Morning Mail and outstayed the latter to win by half a length. Pharatime was third. Patchpocket paid $4.80 for $2, being backed into favoritism.

A return of Sunshine brought out an excellent ladies' day crowd and some exciting racing furnishing entertainment.

Post to Honor Guckeyson At Banquet

By John R. Vosburgh.

Bill Guckeyson, Maryland's great backfield star, is to be among the scores of celebrities in sports and public life at the Touchdown Clubs lavish banquet at the Willard tomorrow night. The versatile, All-Southern ace will be present to receive the award made by The Washington Post for being "the most valuable player on a District college team."

In making its selection, The Post had its task made many steps easier by Guckeyson's incomparable feats of the past season. Although George Washington, Georgetown, Catholic University, American U., Gallaudet and Wilson Teachers had their own stars and vital members of the team, none was able to outshine the all-around talent of Bethesda Bill.

Another banquet announcement made yesterday at the weekly luncheon meeting of the Touchdown Club at the Lafayette Hotel, informed members that Clark Griffith has taken steps to assure the presence of Manager Bucky Harris, of the Nationals, at the head table despite urgent need of the ball club's executive force in New York City at the current league parleys. Harris is making a flying trip from New York for the occasion.

Banquet on the Air.

The banquet will go on the air at 10:30 p. m. over a coast-to-coast network of the National Broadcasting Co., with "Sleepy Jim" Crowley, coach of Fordham, and Senator Pat McCarran as the speakers of the evening.

Three reels of motion pictures of outstanding plays of the season have been scheduled under the direction of Jack Connolly, of Pathe News, and Sidney Lust.

The club was given hints of the gala entertainment program being arranged under the direction of Carter Barron, the Capital's well-known theater executive, and according to all indications the banqueters will be provided with enough stage novelties to satisfy even the most fun-loving patron of Broadway.

Both the Capital and Earle theaters are contributing their current stage talent and the Capital is also calling upon the noted Russian revue leader, Dave Appollon, who is not due to start his run at the theater until Friday. Sizable sections of his famous revue will be brought forth including some acts which committee members claim "will stop the show."

Leemans Plays Sunday for Brewers

By Dave Herman.

Alphonse (Tuffy) Leemans, sensation of the New York Giants of the National Professional Football League, will carry his professional activity to the basketball court this winter, playing under the colors of the Heurich Brewers.

George Washington University's "greatest football player" will make his debut this Sunday with the Brewers in their opening home game against the Johnson Motor Zephyrs of Shepherdstown, W. Va., at the Heurich gym, Manager Bob MacDonald announced last night.

Leemans, leading ground-gainer of the Giants in his first professional season, played his last game of the year Sunday against the Boston Redskins. He will join the Brewer cagers in a workout tomorrow night at the Heurich court.

Leemans was captain of last season's George Washington University team, which, under his leadership, enjoyed one of its most successful campaigns in history. He is a guard, fast and aggressive.

Ed Hargaden, Georgetown Prep School coach, made his debut with the Brewers Sunday in New York at the Hippodrome Theater, where the team lost a thriller to the Whirlwinds, 41 to 33.

This is the former Georgetown captain's first season as a pro. Recently added to the team was Waldo Wegner, former All-Big Six from Iowa State, who is said to be one of the best centers ever to hit this town. Back with the Heurich team are Capt. Ralph Bennie, Otts Zahn, Ev Russell and Whitey Wilson.

Gold Baseballs Here.

Managers of championship teams in The Post Sandlot Association may secure their teams' gold baseballs by applying at The Post sports department during the late afternoon and evening. The awards this year, distributed among 19 leagues, will go to 304 players.

Coach Cotton Plans to Have 'Shooting' Catholic U. Five This Year

Night Drills Booked for Tossers

Cardinals to Make Debut Against Md. Normal Tomorrow Night.

Less emphasis on passing and more on scoring is the new basketball rule to be introduced this winter at Catholic University by Coach "Fod" Cotton, and it will receive its first trial tomorrow night when little Maryland State Normal invades Brookland for its usual battering.

"I've seen a lot of basketball, not only in the East but in the Midwest, and the only difference between the winners and losers as far as I can determine, is that the winners don't miss their shots, no matter how long, while the losers miss some close ones.

"These boys of mine get out there and throw the ball around, work plays and use a lot of energy getting the ball in close to the bucket for snowbirds, but Long Island, New York U., Temple and the others just take a shot when they need points, and they usually get them.

Night Practices Listed.

"From now on we're going to have three night practices a week and they'll be devoted exclusively to developing a scoring eye. Our regular practice time is so limited we can't get in enough shooting practice, not as much as we should have anyhow. But at night we can spend at least an hour doing nothing but shooting, and I think it will have a definite effect in our games."

Cotton is particularly anxious to develop a high-scoring team as the Cardinal squad is weighted down with forwards and almost totally devoid of guards. Last year the team had to make better than an average score to win because of loose guarding, and this year Cotton feels confident even more points will be necessary to win.

Three other games are on the week's card, the initial offerings of the new season. Friday American University faces Johns Hopkins at Baltimore, while Wilson Teachers will be the guests of Kutztown Teachers. Saturday Southeastern travels to Emmitsburg, Md., to help Mount St. Mary's launch its season.

Rivers Beaten By Scott at Baltimore

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Baltimore, Md., Dec. 7.—Hitting the cleaner punches, Howard Scott, Texas cowboy, defeated Joe Rivers, of California, in a sizzling fight tonight. The decision of the three officials was unanimous, but all of the fans did not agree. There were many scattered among the large crowd who thought Rivers had earned the award.

The cowboy was credited with four rounds, Rivers three and three were judged even.

Rivers failed to carry off a single round decisively. Scott won two of his sessions by wide margins, especially the ninth when he tagged Rivers with his Sunday punch, leaving him in distress.

The main bout was a corker throughout, but the semi-windup between Paris Apice, of New York, and Ray ("Kid") Ingram, of Washington, was one of those dreadful things foisted occasionally on the public.

The Boys Would Bet.

It was apparent before the boxers entered the ring that something might be amiss. Gamblers in the rear of the arena were flashing hundred-dollar bills in an effort to get down their wagers. Apice was figured to be the favorite, but the wise ones wanted their money riding on Ingram.

Word of the unusually heavy wagering reached the ears of Jack Pollock, boxing commissioner. He informed his inspectors to warn the fighters before they left the dressing room that the commission would not tolerate any monkey business.

Referee Charley Baum was tipped off to watch the bout with a fishy eye. Charley, a well-known fighter in his day, apparently needed no tip off. He warned the boxers after each round. He watched them miss, slap and clinch through five rounds. In the sixth he called a halt and rendered it no contest.

Pollock announced both purses had been held up.

Santa Clara, the only undefeated, untied major eleven in the country, would be dropped from the first 11 if it should lose to Texas Christian Saturday. This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich.

New York, Dec. 7.

Clark C. Griffith, the old horse trader who brought his talents to big league baseball, is finding his reputation for shrewdness a distinct handicap here at the player-trading sessions and is entering a mild squawk.

POVICH.

"These other club owners are fighting shy of me," said the white-thatched owner of the Washington club, but there was no plaintive tone in his voice. Secretly, Griffith cherishes his soubriquet of the David Harum of the trading sessions and is very much delighted by any reminder.

"I walk to another owner or a manager and start to talk trade and what happens?" demanded Griffith, answering his own question a moment later with "They won't talk. Either that or they give you some fool proposition that you couldn't consider. It wasn't like that in the old days. Everybody had faith in his own ability to bargain and wasn't afraid to make a trade."

The good old days that Griffith probably was referring to were such as that day in 1930 when the late Phil Ball, owner of the St. Louis Browns, dropped into Griffith's lap the most advantageous trade the Nats' owner ever made in his 50 years in baseball.

The winter before, Griffith had suggested to Ball that the Browns trade pitcher Al Crowder and Outfielder Heinie Manush to Washington for Outfielder Goose Goslin. Ball laughed him off, which was no surprise to Griffith who had broached the trade only as a "feeler" in the first place.

But on the day that the trading limit was to expire, Crowder pitched a miserable game for the Browns, and Manush helped the St. Louis club to defeat with a grievous error in the outfield. After the game, the irate Ball called Griffith by telephone and told him to send Goslin along to St. Louis, and he could have "them two bums," or words to that effect.

Griffith was, in fact, a horse trader before he rose to a place of prominence in baseball. A son of the old West, Griffith was the owner of a ranch in Wyoming and learned in the practical school of horse trading the talents which were to win him fame as a dealer in baseball's human chattels.

At that, he takes no particular pride in the deal that won him perhaps his greatest fame as a baseball trader. That was the sale of his son-in-law, Joe Cronin, to Tom Yawkey, owner of the Boston Red Sox for $250,000 cash which set a new purchase-price record for baseball.

"Humph!" comments Griffith on that deal. "I don't deserve any credit for that. I named a quarter-million as the price for Cronin because I thought that would keep Yawkey from buying him. No ball player in the world is worth that much money, but when a man offers you that much you have to take it, don't you? If I'd a-been smart, I might have gotten a half-million from Yawkey. I didn't know he wanted Cronin that badly."

But it's a fact that other club owners and managers concede Griffith to be a shrewd trader. Connie Mack has not made a trade with Griffith in a dozen years and the Yankees have dealt with Griffith only once in that span. The old gentleman is finding it hard to do business up here and it's not only because his trading material is slightly shop-worn.

Lobbying.

Heinie Manush, given his unconditional release by the Red Sox at the end of the season, is here at baseball headquarters on the hunt for a new job . . . A practical joker had Bob Feller paged in the hotel lobbey this afternoon and 14 baseball writers were trampled in the rush for an interview . . . Great Kismet Near Death at Nearby School

Was Branded Unfit for Remount Service Before Fame.

By Bill McCormick.

A cute little sub-deb slinks furtively into the stables of the Arlington Hall School, rakes the scene with cautious glances and sneaks open the door of on of the stalls.

Once in the stall, the little subdeb shoves a lump of sugar quickly into the soft mouth of a massive horse, which is lying on a pile of hay. As the horse thanks her with a grateful look from a pair of sick eyes, the cute little s.-d. hurries out.

The horse is the famed jumper, Kismet. The girl is any one of a hundred students at Arlington Hall. And behind the scene lies a story. A story of a great horse, of a great horseman who loved that great horse, of a——but, let's begin at the beginning.

Way back in 1912, the United States Cavalry imported a big, rawboned horse from Europe for remount service. The horse's parentage was unknown, but made little, if any difference, as a remount horse is to a show horse as a kitchen scullion in the Limehouse district is to Mrs. Simpson.

On the way across the Atlantic, the big horse developed pneumonia. He was pronounced unfit for even remount service and the "D. C." brand, which stamped him as unfit, was seared into his hide, where it remained a badge of honor through many years of glory yet to come.

Sold at Auction.

Kismet, for that was the big horse condemned by the Cavalry, was sold at public auction to Adolph Voght, a well-known horse trainer, whose headquarters are in Brooklyn. Voght nursed Kismet along very carefully until all traces of his illness were removed.

After Adolph had been training Kismet for two or three years, he discovered that the big boy had tremendous jumping powers. Then began Kismet's rise to undying fame. In one show after another he conquered all. Finally came his big moment, a moment that to this day has not been equaled.

High, Wide Jump.

Kismet was entered in a show at Fort Hamilton, Brooklyn. The feature of the show was a high and wide jump. In this class, a high jump is placed in the center, with two smaller jumps on either side. The horses compete against each other until only one is left by a process of elimination. To be eliminated a horse has only to touch either the high jump or the two wide jumps on each side. As the horses continue to compete, the high jump is raised and the two side jumps are moved farther from the center obstacle.

By the time the high jump had been raised to 6 feet and the two side obstacles shoved 22 feet apart, there were only two horses left, Kismet and another valiant contender.

The middle jump was raised to 6 feet 2 inches and the side jumps pushed 24 feet apart. The other horse failed to clear, but Kismet did, thus setting a world record yet unbroken for this class of competition.

Brought $5,000 Price.

Kismet was 14 at the time and much older than most horsse are when they are retired.

A wealthy builder, Trotter by name, was so entranced by the performance that he paid Voght $5,000—then a big price for a horse—just to have Kismet as his own personal mount.

At this point enters Fritz Christian Kleemann, the human hero of our story. Fritz was just over from Germany. In Westphalia his family had been breeding horses since 1934. Fritz had several college degrees, having worked his way through the universities by riding in steeplechases, but things finally got so tough in the old country that he came here, landing in New York with about $2 in cash and 2 cents' worth of knowledge of the English language.

Somehow, Kleeman got employment as a trainer for Voght, and in that capacity he often used to see Trotter riding past on Kismet in Prospect Park. Fritz was so much in love with Kismet that Trotter finally allowed him to ride the horse. Fritz was elated, but that elation was nothing as compared to his joy a few months later when Trotter offered to sell him Kismet for one-tenth as much as he had paid for him.

Now at Arlington Hall.

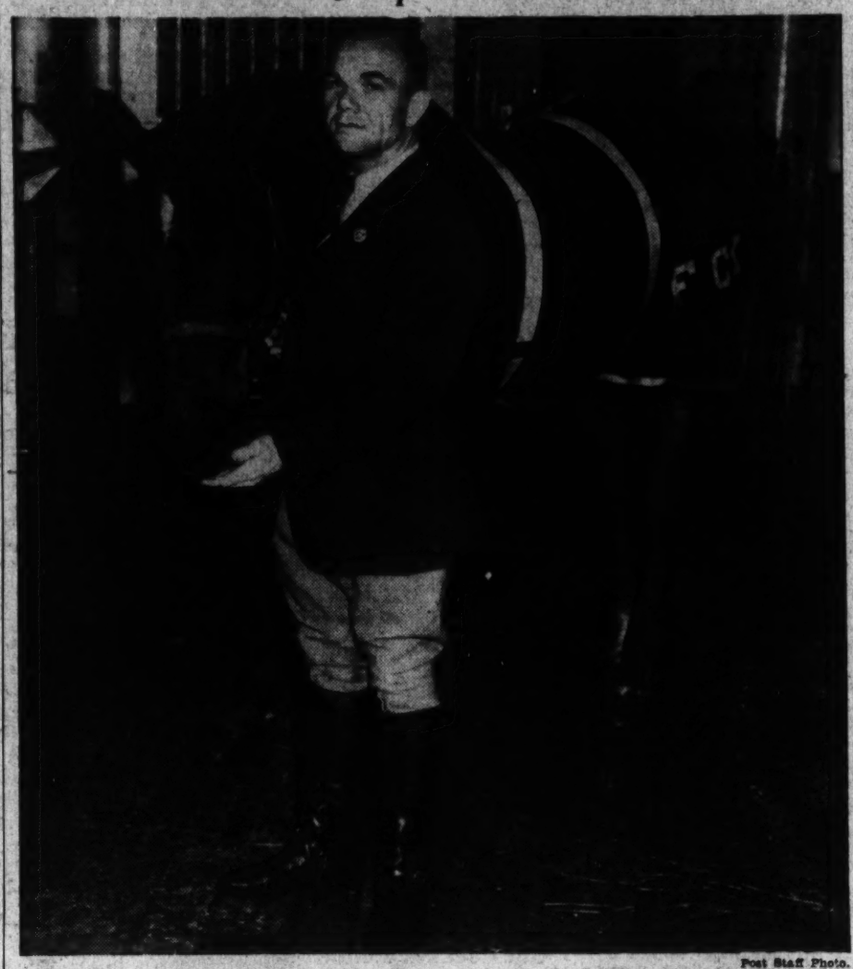

Kleemann had exactly the necessary amount in the bank—and every cent of his savings went toward the purchase of the by then very old steed. Kleemann started entering Kismet in horse shows, and captured many blues in many big shows, including the National Horse Show.

Time and circumstances finally brought Kleemann—and, of course, Kismet—to Arlington Hall. There, as riding instructor, Kleemann found Kismet an invaluable aide. A seasoned performer, Kismet was the horse always used to see just how far a student in equitation had advanced—and also as the horse for the little girls to start jumping with.

Last week Kismet was taken out for a long workout. His performance was so good that Kleemann had visions of a return to former glory. Such was not to be. Old age brought on Kismet a stroke, and the horse lay stricken.

Kleemann tried to keep the kids from learning about the illness of their pet, who by this time had become almost a school institution. But the news leaked out and therein lies the story of the scene described in the first few paragraphs.

the six strokes Guldahl had on him. Guldahl was out in 39 and the former amateur king in 34, 1 under par.

On the second nine, however, Guldahl took a grip on himself and Little went to pieces. He was over par on the first three holes—two over on the eleventh. He topped his approach, dubbed his chip and took a large six. On the par 5 fifteenth he took a 7.

He wound up with 42 for that round. The 76 went with a previous 213 and put him in a tie with Ed Dudley, of Philadelphia, and Ky Laffoon, of Orlando, Fla., for eighth place.

Shute won $650 in fifth place with 287. Tied at sixth place with 288 were Henry Picard, of Hershey, Pa., and Mike Turnesa, of New York.

Buck Newsom Is Placed on The Block

Mack's recent talk with Werber in Washington was not satisfactory, it is reported. Werber is said to have told Mack emphatically that he would not relish a trade that would send him to the last place Athletics, pointing out that his insurance business would enable him to quit the game without financial loss.

The Cardinals' determination to trade Dizzy Dean has been heightened by the personal animosity between Dean and Owner Sam Breadon, it has been learned. General Manager Branch Rickey of the Cardinals is not keen to trade the blustering Dean, but Breadon is tiring of the self-styled Whattaman's continual jibes at the St. Louis club.

Officials of the Cards and Pirates held a long session this morning indicating that the Reds are out of consideration in the Dean deal, despite their offer of $200,000 in cash.

The Cardinals are demanding players in addition to a sizable sum of cash and it is Arky Vaughan, the Pirates shotstop, on whom they have fastened their desires.

Red Rookie's Wedding Spoiled by Reporters

Chicago, Dec. 7 (A.P.).—Phil Weintraub, who joins the Cincinnati Reds as a first baseman next spring, said today he almost got married in Waukegan last Saturday night, but presence of reporters and cameramen caused him to postpone the ceremony.

Weintraub intended secretly to wed Miss Jeanne Holsman, 20-year-old Chicagoan. He wired Bob O'Farrell, veteran major league catcher, to make the necessary arrangements. But the news leaked out, and Phil and his fiancee motored back to Chicago.

Tinker 'Holds His Own' In Battle for His Life

Orlando, Fla., Dec. 7 (A.P.).—Joe Tinker, critically ill of Brights disease and paralysis, held his own tonight, but physicians said his chances of recovery were slim.

The former major league baseball star was stricken last week. He was reported dying Friday night and has gained little since then.

Santa Clara Offered Facilities of Tulane

New Orleans, Dec. 7 (U.P.).—Santa Clara tonight was invited to use facilities of Tulane Univeristy here in training for the New Year's Day Sugar Bowl clash with Louisiana State. Dean Game's Best Showman, Claims Mr. Branch Rickey

New York, Dec. 7 (A.P.).—Branch Rickey, general manager of the St. Louis Cardinals, said today:

1. "The Cards will win the National League pennant by 10 games if they keep Dizzy Dean."
2. "The team that gets Dean in a trade, if he's traded, will win the National League pennant."
3. "Dizzy's worth $150,000 in cash to either a New York or Chicago team in his first year—and that's not counting what he's worth to the team on the mound."
4. "If we don't trade Dean, our team's okay. If we do, we need a whole team, because
5. "Dean's a whole team in himself. He's a 24-year-old supercharged dynamo. He's the greatest showman in the game, a better showman than Babe Ruth ever was. He's the beginning and the end. The Alpha and omega, the uh, the ——."

Whereupon Mr. Rickey, for want of breath, sat down.

England Leads.

Brisbane, Australia, Dec. 7 (A.P.).—Dismissing Australia for a total of 234 runs, England gained a first-inning's lead of 124 runs today in the initial cricket test match between the two countries.

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively
A Special Correspondent.

Stocks Recede Slightly in Less Active Trading; Interest Centers in Low-Priced Shares.

New York, Dec. 7.—With new financing coming on the Government bond list was held fairly firm, but stocks slipped a little on the absence of buying support in the usual industrial leaders. Probably no great attention was paid either to rebellion in Spain or to romance in England. Both sterling and francs closed with a firm tone. Commodities recovered a little. December wheat ended with a gain of 1⅛ cents at 125⅞ cents a bushel.

Activity in the low-priced issues continued, but the gains in some of the lesser lights were not conspicuous enough to cover the rather general decline in standard issues. Most of the declines were suffered on rather light dealings, reflecting the indecision of traders at this time. Turnover of around 2,000,000 shares was the smallest in two weeks.

Steel shares dropped 1 to 2 points in spite of bullish news on the industry's activity. Rails also worked lower. Motor shares felt the blight of thin markets and indifference of big time traders. The catholicity of the decline indicated that the market was responding more to technical trading conditions than to any change in the business position. Mail orders, farm implements and store shares joined with fairly large losses.

Trading at the inactive post was paradoxically active. The various classes of Market Street Railway, Manati Sugar and New York Dock were features. Stocks to lose 1 to 4 points in the general list were Best, Briggs & Stratton, Case, Chrysler, Crown Cork, Ingersoll Rand, National Steel, Spiegel & Ward Baking A. Buoyancy was pronounced in International Hydro-Electric, Utilities Power & Light A shares, International Paper, Paramount, Texas Gulf Producers and Houston Oil.

Treasury Borrows.

Details of the Treasury's financing plans for the middle of the month, announced this morning, brought into focus the Government's monetary policy, which is to maintain through its management of the currency and its spending operations exceedingly cheap money for as long as possible. Without low interest rates it would be difficult for the Government to continue to finance this huge deficits by means of bank credit. For one thing, competitors for bank credit would eat into the Government's bond sales. For another, the expense would become noticeable enough to put on the brakes.

Financing about to be undertaken—refunding of issues falling due on December 15 and the acquisition from the market of more cash—is surprising in that the market had expected a total new cash request for only $300,000,000. Actually $700,000,000 in new cash will be secured, but the higher demand may be restated to mean that $40,000,000 of it is in reality simply a refunding of that amount of Treasury discount bills falling due on the next tax date. It has been the contention of the Treasury that it pays off Treasury bills from taxation, but that has not been the case.

Interest Charges Rise.

Some publicity is given to the fact that the Treasury this time is offering medium term bonds (13 to 17 yeasr) at only 2½ per cent interest rate, the lowest for any previous Government issues with the exception of two special issues of a generation ago. In spite of that, with the retirement of the Treasury discount bills, the maturing 3 per cent and 2¾ per cent notes, and assuming that the bulk of the new obligations will be 2½ per cent, the total interest charges to the Government on an annual basis wil rise by about 27 per cent. or from $23,375,000 to $29,741,000.

Low as will be the coupon on the next bond issue, demand probably will be considerable, as bank excess reserves are hnuge and outside demand for credit continues small. Another story may be told next spring, after the Federal Reserve Board carries out its plan to reduce bank excess reserves to less than $1,000,000,000, after the commercial demand for credit and the spulative use now going into commodity markets makes itself felt.

Our currency and credit managers at Washington before many months will have a difficult problem or two to solve.

Cocoa Futures Break One Cent Per Pound

Heavy profit taking promoted by reports of freer offerings from primary markets caused prices to buckle. March futures, after getting up to 11.43 cents a pound, sold at 10.43, and May delivery declined from 11.47 to 10.50 cents. A one-cent fluctuation is the maximum permitted by the exchange. Cocoa has been in a broad up-trend for several months as a result of rising consumption and short supplies from Africa.

BankingForum Will Be Held At Pittsburgh

Regional Meetings Started by Robert V. Fleming to Be Resumed.

By Thomas M. Cahill.

Banking forums inaugurated last year during the administration of Robert V. Fleming as president of the American Bankers Association, will be resumed during the new administrative year of that organization. These conferences have proved so beneficial that members of the association have asked for their continuance and Tom K. Smith, new president of the National Association, has arranged for three of them.

The first will be held at Pittsburgh January 28 and 29. Portland, Oreg., will be the place of the second on February 25 and 26 and a third is scheduled for Atlanta, Ga., March 25 and 26. These meetings were originated to provide opportunity for interchange of ideas on current banking practices.

The sessions have as their objective the adaptation of banking to the changing economic situation, as well as studies and research in the profession. Speakers at these assemblies will explain the research work of the association with regard to the Federal lending agencies, postal savings and bank chartering. Lending and investment problems, budgets, public relations, operating expense control and income from banking services are among management problems to be considered.

Reilly Addresses Venetian Society

"History of business and finance for the past few years clearly reveals that the adequacy of many of its systems are still in question," said John A. Reilly, president of Second National Bank, in an address to the Venetian Society of Columbus University, at its meeting last evening.

"The problems of the immediate future in the accounting field are so complex that the best available talent will have to be employed by captains of industry attempting to reach a satisfactory conclusion.

"The members of your profession can no longer be satisfied to assemble bookkeeping figures and report their totals. Business and financial leaders will expect you to develop vehicles that will enable them to properly systematize their businesses. In this field you will have a rare opportunity for service which should be very profitable to you if you successfully conduct yourselves in your professional work."

TwoCompanies Lift Dividends, Vote Specials

National Steel, Spiegel, May, Stern Declare Distributions.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Dec. 7.—Directors of Spiegel, May, Stern Co., Inc., Chicago mail order house, declared a special dividend of $2 a share on the common stock, payable December 18 to holders of record December 12.

The also announced that in 1937 the stock would be on a $5 annual basis, that is, equal to $1 a share after giving effect to the 5-for-1 split-up approved by the stockholders at a special meeting Saturday. At that meeting the stockholders also voted to change the name of the company to Spiegel, Inc.

A common dividend of $1.62½ was announced today by National Steel Corporation, as well as an increase in the annual dividend rate to $2.50. The current rate is $1.50 a year. Of the dividend declared today 62½ cents represents a payment which would have been declared to establish a new $2.50 basis at the meeting which ordinary would have been held in January.

The company's announcement said inclusion of the 6½-cent payment now obviates the necessity for the January meeting and reduces the amount of the Federal undistributed earnings tax payable on 1936 earnings. Henceforth dividends will be declared in the final month of the quarter for which they are payable. The payment will be made December 21 to stockholders of record December 12.

St. Louis, Dec. 7 (AP).—A plan of reorganization for the St. Louis-Southwestern (Cotton Belt) Railway, which petitioned a year ago for reorganization under the amended bankruptcy act, was filed today with the Federal court here and the Interstate Commerce Commission in Washington.

The plan proposed to reduce the railroad's capitalization from $112,319,310 to $94,619,165. The reorganized company, under the plan, would assume $20,000,000 in existing first mortgage bonds, $957,000 in equipment trust certificates of the Cotton Belt, and $950,000 in first mortgage bonds of two subsidiaries, Gray's Point terminal and Shreveport Bridge and Terminal.

The present second mortgage bond issue totaling $3,042,500 would be replaced by a new and larger, second mortgage issue.

Foreign Exchange.

The British crisis over King Edward's matrimonial problems again influenced foreign exchange markets yesterday, and the pound sterling sagged.

In New York it was off ⅝ cent at $4.89⅝, while in the British capital the dollar gained ¼ of a cent to close at 4.89⅝ to the pound.

French francs were also quoted lower, in New York at 4.65½ cents, off .00⅛ of a cent, and in Paris at the equivalent of 4.654 cents to the franc, which compared with the Saturday New York closing rate of 4.658 cents.

Swiss francs were .00½ of a cent higher at 22.99 cents, and the Canadian dollar at 100.03⅛, was off 1-32 of a cent.

Boston Wool Market.

Boston, Dec. 7 (AP).—(United States Department of Agriculture.) — Domestic wools were mostly quiet in the Boston market today, but quotations were unchanged from last week.

In view of the limited supply of many lines of domestic wools immediately available, holders were not inclined to consider offers that were below recent selling prices. Prices at opening sales of this week in Australia were apparently about the same as last week. According to cables received by private concerns in Boston, American buyers were operating, but there were indications that the demand from this country had lost the keenness of recent weeks.

Income Rises To High Point For Recovery

60 Billion Expected This Year Will Be Peak Since 1930.

New York, Dec. 7.—The national income produced in the United States rose sharply in October to a new high peak for the recovery movement and to the highest level since May, 1930, according to the Alexander Hamilton Institute. The income amounted to $5,844,000,000 in October as against $5,365,000,000 in the same month last year, an increase of 8.7 per cent. For the first ten months, the national income amounted to $49,419,000,000 this year as against $43,106,000,000 last year, a gain of 14.6 per cent.

The prospect is that the national income for the full year will be in the vicinity of $60,000,000,000 with the probability that it will exceed rather than fall below this figure. The current year will thus represent the fourth consecutive year of expansion in the national income.

1932 Low Point.

Last year, the annual income was $52,959,000,000 while, at the low for the depression in 1932, it amounted to only $39,545,000,000. The national income this year will be the largest since 1930 but it will still fall considerably below the record high of $81,034,000,000 in 1929.

The price level in October was slightly lower than in September. Consequently, the gain in the national income represented an even greater gain in the quantity of goods produced. In October, for the first time since the recovery movement began, the quantity of goods produced rose above the average monthly level in the pre-depression year 1929. Expansion occurred in all the major economic divisions. Sino - Japanese Crisis Reached In Labor Strife

600 Marines at Tsingtao Attempt to Seize City Water Supply.

By the United Press.

Shanghai (Tuesday), Dec. 8.—China and Japan faced an open break today over Tsingtao, scene of labor strife in Shantung Province, where Chinese authorities declared martial law after Japanese bluejackets entered the city.

The situation at Tsingtao became definitely worse when 600 more ships bluejackets landed from ten warships and attempted to seize the city reservoir. It was surrounded by the city's defense corps, and when 3,000 Shantung troops arrived, the Japanese retreated.

Tsingtao's mayor, Admiral Shen Hung-Lieh, telegraphed that the Japanese had presented a fresh series of 12 demands, which the city government promptly rejected.

Additional Japanese warships were en route to Tsingtao from Dairen and South China waters. One vessel anchored directly opposite the city government building. The war-like maneuvers followed a lockout of 36,000 mill workers by Japanese-owned mills.

Chinese military dispatches said that a Chinese counter offensive against pro-Japanese Manchu-Mongol irregulars was under way in Suiyuan Province where Chinese forces had reached Huanghuatan, a short distance across the Chahar border and only 4 miles from Mongol trenches.

New Apartment Will Be Sought For Legislators

$3,000,000 Structure for Congress Would Be Constructed.

By the Associated Press.

Spurred by what he called "exorbitant rents" and "acute shortage" of living accommodations in the District, Representative Alfred F. Beiter, of New York, began work yesterday on a bill which he hopes will solve the housing problem for the 531 members of Congress.

Beiter said his bill would create a new Congressional committee to borrow money from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and build an apartment house on Capitol Hill large enough to accommodate all the members. If some did not wish to live there, he said, the space could be given over to Capitol attaches or members' secretaries.

He estimated the apartment would cost between $3,000,000 and $4,000,000. He said members would be permitted to "buy" apartments in the building and "sell" them upon leaving Congress, paying for them on the rental plan so eventually the member would own his apartment.

"Many members will be hard put to it this year to find living accommodations in the District because of the shortage of space," Beiter said. "This condition can be remedied only by new construction, and I think it would be a good idea to have one apartment house large enough for all the members, close to the Capitol. The building could be paid for quickly, no one would lose a cent, and the members of Congress would have good, convenient living accommodations at reasonable rents."

"I am trying to get my idea into bill form, and I think I'll have a bill most members of the House and Senate will be willing to vote for when they get to know something about the District of Columbia rents."

Alaska Colony Inquiry Threatened by Thomas

By the Associated Press.

Sentaor Thomas (Democrat), Oklahoma, said yesterday he will demand a Senate investigation of the Federal farm colony in Alaska if Congress is asked for further expansion of the project.

Ross L. Sheely, manager of the project in the Matanuska Valley, recently attended budget hearings here to request funds for another year. His annual report, not yet made public, is expected to throw light on plans for the colony's future.

Thomas has inspected the settlement and pronounced it a failure.

Flesh Is Grafted On Crushed Hand

Greenville, S. C., Dec. 7 (AP).—Surgeons here encased Dewey Wright's crushed hand in an abdominal incision to allow the skin to grow over the bones and restore it to usefulness.

Wright, a 32-year-old textile worker, fell beneath a train on September 21. When he reached the hospital there was nothing left of his hand but a few bones. Today he has a hand, and a thumb and an index finger as well. Physicians said he can go back to his loom in the mill.

Two surgeons performed the operation. They made an incision in Wright's abdomen and inserted the bony hand. Arm and body were placed in a cast.

After two weeks the cast was taken off, and some time later the surgeons sliced the tissue from around the sides of the hand, freeing it from its abdominal encasement. The abdominal skin had, as they hoped, grown to the hand bones. Then, from Wright's nip, the surgeons transferred bits of flesh to the palm of his hand.
